H. F. KENNY ACQUITTED ON CROWN'S OWN EVIDENCE

Hon. Justice Hyndman Withdraws the Case From the Jury and Dismisses it Without Hearing Defence Witnesses.

Holding that the relations that existed between the Kenny Farm Agency, Ltd., and the Terminal Grain Co., Ltd., constituted a partnership;

That there had been no evidence whatever to indicate any criminal intent; and

That the action against Kenny should never have been started in the first place, and had no right to be found in that Court at all, being purely a civil matter of accounting;

The Honorable Mr. Justice Hyndman, in the Supreme Court sitting here, last Friday afternoon, dismissed the case against H. F. Kenny which had been instigated by the Terminal Grain Co. charging him with the theft of ten carloads of grain last November.

The case was opened on Thursday morning, and proceeded during the balance of the day, a night session being held to expedite matters. The morning and afternoon sessions of the Court on Friday were taken up in the examination of witnesses, and had been called by the Crown only.

The Crown having concluded its case about 6 p.m., W. E. Payne, counsel for the accused, rose and announced that the Judge withdraw the case from the jury and dismiss it. Mr. Payne cited his reasons for making the motion. He contended that the Crown had failed to make a case or produce any evidence to substantiate the charges against Kenny. He could see no reason why the Court should be called upon to listen to the defence.

The Justice having asked the jury to retire while the legal point was being argued, then asked Mr. Selwood, counsel for the prosecution, what he had to say on the subject. About half an hour was spent in argument, mostly between the Justice and Mr. Selwood, Mr. Selwood being frequently to convince the Justice that the Crown had shown a case, but it was all to no avail, the Justice persistently contended that he could not see no evidence of guilt in what had been submitted to the Court. There had been a loose system of accounting between the two companies, and they needed a reckoning very badly, but the criminal court was not the place to fight it out.

Mr. Selwood finally succumbed to the inevitable and took his seat. The Justice then directed that the jury be called back into Court and addressed them. He stated that he did not consider it was necessary to go into details as to why he had made his decision. He had, however, decided that the Crown had failed to show any evidence on which he could allow the charge to the jury to bring in a verdict. There was no reason why the time of the Court and jury should be taken up in listening to the evidence of the defence. He had decided to withraw the case from the jury altogether and dismiss it.

"Gentlemen of the Jury," said the Justice, you are discharged from further attendance upon this Court." The jury consisted of F. Michener, W. E. Lord, F. B. Woolley, J. T. Dale, J. A. Hale and B. W. Bennett.

The case created a good deal of interest throughout the city and district and, particularly at the Thursday evening session, every available part of the Court was crowded to capacity. Mr. Kenny has been prominently connected with the business life of Red Deer for the past five or six years, during the greater part of this time he has handled a large percentage of the grain and live stock that have been shipped from this point.

In the summer of 1919, an incorporated Company, known as the Kenny Farm Agency, Ltd., was organized, with Kenny as manager, and R. J. Thompson as secretary.

According to the evidence of F. C. Patterson, who was manager of the Terminal Grain Co., at the time, an arrangement was entered into between the two companies in the fall of 1919 for the buying of grain at Red Deer. The Terminal Co. was to supply the money and make the sales at the terminals. The Kenny Co. was to do the buying and stand the local expense of loading and the rest. It would appear that the two companies had a very successful year during the season of 1919-20, the profits being over $10,000 on the grain transactions without taking the expenses into account.

In the spring of 1920, the erection of an elevator was undertaken. In this connection, the Terminal Co. supplied considerable sums of money, and seem to have taken security at times for advances that were made. Mr. Kenny appeared to have been personally in charge of the construction work for the Kenny Co. There was considerable question at points in the evidence as to the liability of the companies interested in view of the absence of any written contract of any kind at any time.

The cross-examination of witnesses by Mr. Payne brought out the statements that the Terminal Grain Co. were in a more or less serious financial condition in the fall of 1920, and found it necessary to suspend the operation of their business on normal lines.

On the 16th of November, Kenny as manager for his company, wrote a letter to the Terminal Co. citing the fact that several thousand dollars' worth of Terminal Grain Co. cash tickets, emanating from Red Deer, had been turned down by the bank in Calgary, thus creating a rather serious local situation. To meet the demands for payment for grain that had been taken into the elevator, and to pay for wages of workmen and materials used in the building, ten carloads of grain had been shipped to Thompson & Sons, Winnipeg. The money raised by getting advances on these cars had been used in paying the local demands.

Patterson had visited Red Deer on the 17th of November, and Mr. Kenny had gone with him to Calgary that same evening. It appeared that while in Calgary an arrangement was entered into between Mr. Kenny and the Terminal Co., whereby the latter was to get a transfer of the property in Red Deer, and that the former was to be largely relieved from the re-purchase of the property on conditions outlined.

A. R. Betts had entered into the transactions at this point, having come to Red Deer to remove the grain from the elevator and ship it out. Betts had been around Red Deer for two or three weeks at that time.

The evidence of Betts had to do mostly with the accounts and records of the company regarding the transactions at the elevator. At one time Mr. Payne asked Betts if he was for the big kind angel that had sworn out the information against Kenny in January, after the Terminal Co. had been given the grab, the elevator, all the accounts and records and the balance of the money remaining in the bank to the credit of the Kenny Co., knowing that Kenny had not had a dollar of the money himself nor had he diverted any of it to uses outside of the business.

Mr. Payne said: "Mr. Betts, have you ever read 'The Merchant of Venice?'

"No," replied Betts, "but I have seen the play."

"Too bad we didn't have a moving picture machine here now," was Mr. Payne's retort.

Geo. Hill, government grain inspector, at Calgary, identified the weight and grade certificates produced as official documents.

Camille Lerouge produced the original telegram calling Kenny and Miss Elsie McEwan produced a telegram that had been sent to Winnipeg.

Alex. McKay gave evidence regarding the building of the elevator and the loading of grain. Mr. McKay had been employed by Mr. Kenny during the entire season. He had also assisted Betts in loading out the grain that was in the elevator after it had been handed over to the Terminal Co.

Cross-examined by Mr. Payne, Mr. McKay was asked:

"Did Mr. Betts ever tell you that if he was operating an elevator like the one here, he would have 1,000 bushels for himself every month?" Witness admitted that Betts had said so. McKay had told Betts, however, that while he might be able to do that in some places, he could not do it with the farmers around Red Deer.

C. C. Gamble, manager of the Bank of Montreal, testified regarding the various banking transactions that had been conducted in regard to the cars of grain in question. Mr. Gamble maintained that there was a serious local situation last year on account of the failure of the Terminal Co. to pay the cash tickets promptly and the ultimate suspension of the business altogether.

Mr. Gamble had paid special attention to the handling of the funds by the Kenny Farm Agency, and he was satisfied that the money raised on the shipment of the ten cars of grain had all been spent in paying for grain or in paying for work and materials on account of the elevator building. Mr. Kenny had not received any of the money personally. Every facility had been afforded the Terminal Grain Co. to examine all the documents held by the Bank. On the order of the Kenny Farm Agency, the balance remaining in the Bank to the credit of the Kenny Co. had been paid over to the Terminal Co. about the end of November last year.

It was after hearing these Crown witnesses, and before the defence had placed a single witness on the stand, that the case was withdrawn from the jury and dismissed.

About thirty members of the Craft from Red Deer motored to Innisfail on Wednesday night to attend a special meeting of Innisfail Lodge No. 8, A.F. & A.M. The gathering was one of the most representative and enjoyable meetings ever held in this Masonic district and reflects great credit on the officers and members of Innisfail Lodge, who worked so hard for its success.

MORE HARD LUCK FOR McPHERSON BROS.

McPherson Bros. received a message Sunday afternoon to the effect that their hardware store at Hatton, Sask., had been burned to the ground. The store was situated in the hotel building there. It appears from the message that the fire started in a pool room and that practically the entire business portion of the city was wiped out.

Many of our readers will remember that the same firm lost their store at that point early in the late summer. This is the second time, in fact, since taking over the Day Hardware business here that they have been called upon to face the loss at Hatton.

J. D. McPherson left on the early morning train for the scene of the fire. The loss is well protected by insurance. The interruption of business at this season of the year is a serious matter for the firm, who fear that it may be necessary to erect a building before they can get a place to move into.

PRESBYTERIAN ANNIVERSARY

The congregation of Knox Presbyterian church turned out in large numbers for the anniversary services last Sunday last. The appearance of the building was greatly improved by the recent plastering and painting to which it had been subjected.

The music by the choir was greatly appreciated. Under the leadership of Reg. Taylor with Miss Sater as organist, the choir is showing good progress, with pleasure and profit to the congregation, Sunday by Sunday. The anthems were rendered with a heartiness and interpretation that was very creditable.

Rev. A. McTaggart, Calgary, conducted the services and proved himself to be a fluent and effective speaker with a broad grasp of present day needs. In the evening he spoke from the text "I am come that they might have life and that they might have it more abundantly."

The speaker divided humanity into two great classes—those who take the view that they are only going through life once and must, therefore, get what they can as they pass along the way; opposed to these are the class who claim that the world owes them a living and refuse even to work. The latter class, like a prairie fire, leave a trail of blackness and devastation behind them.

Christ was always an unselfish and untiring worker. The physical energy which he put into his ministry on earth sapped the very foundation of his vitality. He came to change the conditions that are productive of death in the world, starvation, unsanitary conditions, and war must be abolished by removing the causes that produce them.

Christianity is not merely an unking "don't." If it really does narrow, or restrict the life, it is a curse and not a blessing. Christ says that the mission of Christianity is "That your joy might be full." Whenever Christ asks his followers to renounce or give up something, he always has something better to give.

The speaker enunciated his creed to be, "If there is anything worth while in life I want to get it." The difference of opinion comes in deciding what is worth while. For perhaps the majority of people it is a toss up whether it is worth while to die.

ANNIVERSARY TEA

The women of the congregation sustained their reputation for being able to prepare and serve an excellent supper, and the people showed their appreciation by attending in large numbers on Monday evening.

At the opening of the concert, Mr. Brown, who acted as chairman, on behalf of the congregation of Knox church extended a sincere welcome to the ministers of all the other Protestant churches, all of whom had come to town within the last year. Dr. Crummy, in replying, expressed his genuine good will and his hope for the real prosperity of all the churches which he described as allies in a good cause.

The musical program, a copy of which follows, was a revelation of some of the splendid musical talent that we have at home:

Anthem, "O Lord How Manifold," Choir; song, Mr. Reg. Taylor; song, Mr. C. W. Hamilton; song, Mrs. W. E. Muir. Address, Rev. Dr. Crummy. Anthem, "We Praise Thee," Choir; song, Mrs. E. M. Smith; song Mr. Reg. Taylor; Anthem, "The Radiant Morn," Choir.

The improvements to the church are tasty and effective. The ceiling has been decorated by Mr. Hardy & Rodd. The painting and stencilling was done by H. G. Stone & Sons.

DEATH OF MRS. A. BESANT

Mrs. Annie Besant died last evening at her home here. Deceased was born in England, and has lived at Red Deer for a great many years. She was a faithful member of St. Luke's church, and for a number of years has been lingering for some time, suffering from cancer.

Miss Besant, faithful daughter and companion of the deceased, will have the sympathy of many old friends in her bereavement.

J. Malcolm Co. wrote re Liability Insurance policy, stating same could not be changed.

The Workmen's Compensation Board wrote that it was necessary for the city to purchase several gas masks for the use of the members of the Fire Brigade in combatting fires.

The secretary wrote all monies due the department had been forwarded.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

DR. J. COLLISON,
A. T. STEPHENSON,
Commissioners.

The report was adopted.

Frank Michener addressed the Council regarding the question of farmers peddling meat around the city. He contended it was a great hardship for the butchers to be taxed heavily for conducting a business in the city while farmers were allowed to sell meat free. He did not object so much to selling meat by the quarter, but he contended they should not be allowed to sell in smaller quantities.

The Commissioners will look into the matter fully and inform Mr. Michener on the law bearing on the question.

Moved by Ald Turnbull and Broughton, that the Commissioners proceed in collecting the service tax by notifying the employers that they are compelled to collect the service tax by deducting it from the wages of their employees who are liable for the tax. Carried.

"THE HUMAN SPIDER"

Red Deer had a visit from the "Human Spider," reputed world's champion building climber, on Monday evening. The report of his performances in Calgary, where he climbed the walls of the Herald building and Palliser Hotel, had spread through the city.

An enthusiastic crowd gathered to see him climb the Michener Block. Despite the fact that he went up the walls a couple of times, he was unable to negotiate the heavy metal cornice and gave it up.

Proceeding to the Bank of Commerce, he scaled the building without difficulty and then stood on his head on the corner of the corner.

It was a particularly clever feat, but very few of the citizens seem inclined to rival his performance.

DR. MICHAEL CLARK MAY CONTEST ONE EDMONTON RIDING

There is a fairly well-defined movement on foot to have Dr. Michael Clark, federal member for Red Deer, run in one of the Edmonton constituencies. The movement has not as yet taken any definite shape, but scores of prominent citizens have expressed their willingness to solidly support Dr. Clark in case he decides to turn his back on his old riding.

Since his break with his old chief, the Hon. T. A. Crerar, leader of the National Progressive party, it is regarded locally that "fighting Red Michael" is unlikely to run in Red Deer, and for this reason it is believed that Edmonton would welcome him with open arms as the doctor has hosts of admirers in the city.

There is also a belief current in the city that despite the defection of some of the dyed-in-the-wool U. F. A. supporters in Red Deer, his supporters in that constituency would rally to him as never before.

BIG AREA WILL BENEFIT BY IRRIGATION

When the irrigation schemes at present being planned in the southern part of the province are completed, there will be fully three-quarters of a million acres benefitted, according to the estimates of those closely in touch with the situation. This will mean the holding of a great number of settlers on the land, for while perhaps only a few acres of a quarter section may be actually served with water, it will probably be enough to give him his living and make available the rest of his farm for grazing.

Actual work is more or less pending the decision of the international waterways commission, which recently held its sitting at Lethbridge. Arrangements for temporary financing of the United Irrigation company, which will serve the Cluston district, are being speeded up, and it is probable that work will be started there next month.

A group of people from west of Wetaskiwin are pressing for the formation of a drainage district to take care of the district around Bear Hills lake. They have petitioned the government for leave to organize into a district, but no action has been taken as yet.

Sergt. Collin Barron, late of the 3rd battalion, Toronto, the youngest V. C., has been married to Miss Helen Milne of Toronto.

MEIGHEN TO MAKE TOUR OF WEST

To Talk of Grain in His Western Speeches.

Ottawa, September 23.—Premier Meighen leaves tomorrow morning at 8 o'clock for Toronto, where he will spend the afternoon in consultation with friends, leaving for Portage la Prairie in the evening. This is the beginning of the long "swing around the circle," which Mr. Meighen will make in the coming ten weeks, during which time he will speak in every part of the country.

TO TAKE OFFENSIVE

It is understood that the premier will go extensively into the grain handling question in his western speeches and the recent commission of inquiry and its abrupt end will be referred to. The premier is determined to carry the war into the camp of the Farmers, and the action of Mr. Crerar and the Grain Growers' organization in invoking the law to stop the inquiry, will be severely criticized. Returning he will speak in Montreal on September 30, and then proceed to the maritime provinces, where he will touch the high spots. Later on he will spend not less than three weeks in Ontario and will later go west again, spending two weeks in British Columbia. It is understood that in Ontario Sir Thomas White will take an active part in the fight campaigning with the premier.

FARMERS DISORGANIZED?

Reports received here during the past few days from Conservative leaders in Ontario have been to the effect that the Farmers' party in Ontario was becoming disorganized and Howard Ferguson, leader of the opposition in the legislature there, has been predicting here that Mr. Meighen will carry not less than 60 of the 82 seats. Other reports do not bear out this optimistic estimate, as the Farmers are preparing to contest practically all the rural seats, and there is as yet no reliable indications that their organization has become demoralized, as might be inferred from Mr. Ferguson's predictions.

Interest has been aroused in the announcement which Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King made at Montreal last night that he had finally decided to contest the seat in North York. This will make a three-cornered contest between Mr. King, Mrs. R. W. E. Barnaby and the sitting member, Mr. J. A. M. Armstrong, with the odds in favor of the latter.

Potatoes delivered by growers at Calgary at $20 ton; by the bushel 75c; not shipping from southern sections in any quantity.

Creamery Butter at Edmonton 41c in cartons and 38c in cartots; most of the shipments going west. Dairy butter, quality poor and demand slow; price around 17c. Hay—

Slow—Competition from B. C. Manitoba and American states curtailing Alberta outlet at present prices; dealers paying $13 to $16 on upland; $20 to $25 on timothy; $12 to $15 on green feed.

Hides—

Very quiet—No outlet for country hides; dealers still taking few at 2c to 3c.

Firm—Not much business, but prices steady and no change expected until after St. Louis sale.

Wool—

WONDERFUL GAIN IN WEIGHT REPORTED

Young Woman Only Weighed 76 Pounds—Now Weighs Over 100, and is Gaining Every Day.

"Before I began taking Tanlac I only weighed 76 pounds; I now weigh over one hundred and am gaining every day," said Miss LaRue Davis, of Chattanooga, Tenn.

"I bought my first bottle of Tanlac at Gas City, Ind., and it helped me so much that I continued using it. I have always been very delicate and suffered a great deal from stomach trouble and rheumatism. I rarely ever had any appetite and simply could not relish anything. I fell off until I only weighed 76 pounds and was so thin I looked perfectly awful. This is the condition I was in when I began taking Tanlac.

"Oh, I feel so different now. Even my complexion is improved. My appetite is good and I can hardly get enough to eat. Tanlac is simply grand, and I can truthfully say it is the only medicine that has ever done me any good."

Tanlac is sold in Red Deer by the Gaetz-Cormeit Drug & Book Co., Ltd., and by leading druggists everywhere.

Lumbering in British Columbia

The greatest industry in British Columbia is lumber. Many thousands of men are employed in handling it, from the adventurous prospector who sets out for parts unknown and unexplored to look for fresh and profitable timber-licenses, down to the expert polisher who finishes off the beautifully veined panel of Douglas Fir at the factory.

It is estimated that there are 400 billion feet of merchantable timber in the Province, more than half the forest wealth of Canada, and experts say that over five times the amount at present cut every year could be used without encroaching too much on the timber resources of the Province.

The value of forest products for 1919 was $70,285,094, but this was largely owing to the high prices prevailing for all lumber, wood-pulp, etc., due to a world shortage and a great demand.

The Douglas Fir is the most famous of all British Columbia's trees, growing to a height of 250 ft. and 6 and 9 ft. in diameter. It is used for house construction, boat-building, mine props, poles, railway ties, bridge and trestle timbers and many other things.

Then there is the Red Cedar, famed all over the world for the shingles it produces, doors, frames and finely dressed panelling for lining living-rooms; the Sitka Spruce for aeroplanes, and Western Hemlock for box-manufacturing and pulpwood.

Vancouver is a city of saw-mills; there is a fringe of them lining the creeks and inlets of the coast around the city and one seldom looks out to sea without watching some little tug towing a huge boom of logs behind it that have come perhaps from some camp hundreds of miles away up the coast.

Who shall say the lumberjack's life is not one of the best there is? Care free and next to nature, he spends his day in the great outdoors with the scent of the sap that oozes out of the fresh-cut cedar, the smell of the wood-smoke of his camp fires, of wet moss and bursting balsam bark.

Instead of the deafening din of restless humanity he hears the roar of a distant waterfall, the call of wild geese or the warning cry of his fellows — "Timber!" — re-echoing thro' the silent forest before thunderous thud tells him that another giant fir has fallen beneath their hands.

His good day's work done, he has nothing else to think about but his evening meal all ready waiting for him at the cook-house — and a pipe one to all those who have their being in it, from the lumber-king himself down to the expert sawyer who can command almost any wage he asks by reason of his rare ability.

There are in British Columbia 6 pulp and paper mills, 212 saw-mills and 70 shingle mills, so it will be realized that the lumber world in this Province is a vastly important

WARMING UP

The political pot is showing signs of increasing heat. However, it always needs the announcement of day and date to bring things to the necessary boiling point.

The U.F.A. Convention here on Friday will be an event of much more than local interest, although, as we have stated in these columns previously, there is not the same interest that there would have been if Dr. Clark had not voiced his difference of opinion with Leader Crerar. From present appearances, the U.F.A. Convention is likely to be a fairly open field for the various contestants. To say that there will not be any wire pulling is to assume that human nature has undergone a radical change in recent times. In the past, men have usually been keen for a nomination if it was presumed that the selection might carry with it a reasonably sure thing.

After the victories of the recent provincial campaign, the Farmers might be pardoned for assuming that their convention will name, not merely the candidate, but the member of the next parliament of Canada for this riding. Even at that, however, there is many a slip between the cup and the lip.

Dr. Clark's intentions have not been announced yet, but there is reason to believe that he has not entirely given up the idea of entering as a contestant. A great many of the electors will await his decision with interest. Our faith in the Doctor's ability to make things interesting in an election campaign any time is very strong.

The intention of the Liberals is a mute question. As for the Government supporters, the man who runs away with the idea that Premier Meighen has no friends in the Red Deer riding is laboring under a delusion.

When the lists are finally closed the chances are three, if not four, contestants will face the starter in this riding. An entirely unprecedented number of candidates will probably be found throughout the entire Dominion.

THE KENNY CASE

The outcome of the trial of the Kenny case, before the Supreme Court last week, has been a source of widespread satisfaction to the people of Red Deer. Mr. Kenny has been one of the most discussed individuals in our midst, and needless to say, there have been several very ugly rumors circulated. As a rule people are prone to pass judgment on almost anything, even without any knowledge whatever of the facts of the case.

It is difficult to estimate the type of mind which controls a firm with the pretentions of the Terminal Grain Co. and prompts it to institute criminal proceedings against a man without any more warrant for doing so than Mr. Justice Hyndman was able to find in the evidence. The acton gives the appearance of a determined effort to pass the buck somewhere.

An outstanding feature of the case was the incisiveness with which the presiding Justice penetrated the mass of details submitted in the evidence and grasped the principles underlying the case.

Needless to say The News is specially gratified at the outcome of the case in view of the prominent position which Mr. Kenny has held on the staff of this paper for the past seven months. The people of Red Deer are gratified that one of the citizens has not been as bad as he has been painted. Society is so constituted that the criminal act of one is bound to reflect to some degree on all.

The case emphasizes the need of some revision in the administration of our criminal law. In the great majority of cases the accused are not put to undue inconvenience, consistent with the proper discipline of wrong doers. But when a man can be put under arrest and compelled to carry a $12,000 bail bond for eight months on an action which the presiding judge states should never have been started, there is something not altogether right.

In Kenny's case he would have been kept in confinement during this time if it had not been for the friends who were willing to stand as his bondsmen. Probably, however, the criticism should be directed, not against the legal practices, but against the perversity of individuals who will take advantage of the law to perpetrate persecution instead of prosecution. Some day a method may be found of correctly estimating the mental attitude of those who make accusations in our Courts.

THE SCHOOL FAIR

The holding of the School Fair in our midst next Friday is an event of much more than passing importance. There has not been the blare of trumpets that are incidental with so many of the special occasions, but true merit cannot always be estimated by the amount of noise that is made.

The boys and girls of this district, representing many of our rural schools, have been making steady preparation for months, and this Fair means a great deal to them. It will have an important effect in developing their abilities to qualify as the leaders in agriculture, horticulture and the homely arts, later on.

It is the duty of our citizens to turn out to the School Fair next Friday and encourage the children as well as those who are giving bountifully of their time and talents in encouraging the boys and girls in friendly competition.

THE SUPREME COURT

Red Deer was honored last week in having as the presiding Justice at the Supreme Court sittings, the Honorable Mr. Justice Hyndman, who has recently been appointed to the new Appellate Court. The position that he held last spring as chairman of the Government Commission appointed to investigate the grain trade gave him experience in that connection that was valuable in at least one case that was before the Court. Spectators at the Court were very favorably impressed with the able manner in which the Justice conducted the affairs of the Court.

W. E. Payne, the local barrister, is to be congratulated on the success which attended his efforts at this Court. It is not often that one counsel is successful in having two cases withdrawn from the jury and dismissed at one brief sitting of a Supreme Court. Mr. Payne won both cases by his cross examination. It is a demonstration of the fact that the good lawyers are not all found in the large cities.

Canadians have reason to be proud of the Judicial system in vogue here, and the fact that the accused can almost invariably depend on getting a fair trial. In the recent sittings at least two of the accused appeared before the Court without counsel and were given every consideration by the Court.

Mr. P. H. Russell, Innisfail, was justly complimented by the Justice on the able manner in which he conducted the defence in the Rutledge case, on only a very few hours' notice, having been assigned to the case by the Justice just the day before the hearing. It is the right of every man under the British Constitution to have fair trial. It is our pride and our glory that no matter how heinous the crime may be, this is invariably done.

This was probably the first occasion in the annals of Red Deer Courts that the death sentence has been pronounced, and it is to be hoped that it will be the last time that the malicious taking of human life may make it necessary to exact the extreme penalty, here or elsewhere in this fair land.

HIGH RIVER WIRELESS STATION HEARS LOS ANGELES CONCERT

The Radiophone Promises to Revolutionize Method of Transmitting Long Distance Message—Music Played Thousands of Miles Distant Can Be Heard Distinctly.

(High River Times).

Several citizens of High River had the unique experience during the past month of listening to concerts given by the Los Angeles Symphony orchestra, the sounds being flashed across the continent by the Colin B. Kennedy Company and the De Forest Radio Corporation of California and received at the High River wireless station on a very sensitive radio detector, which was imported from England and which is the latest development along this line. A seven-stage amplifier, such as is used at the station here, magnifies signals and sounds one hundred thousand times and enables persons assembled in the wireless room to quite distinctly hear music transmitted by the various radiophone companies located near Los Angeles and San Francisco. The sound waves are sent out into the ether by wireless telephone, and although a lofty range of mountains intervenes, the music is heard as distinctly and as free from interruption as though coming from an adjacent room. It was very interesting to those who had the pleasure of being present on these occasions, and in this connection the wireless expert, Mr. Grant, was courtesy itself in making it possible for visitors to hear what might be termed a "wireless concert," for the first time in their lives.

We are informed there are several radiophone companies in the States, and all those interested in wireless and who have a receiving apparatus can listen free of charge to concerts rendered by these companies. The cost of equipment is not expensive and in time, no doubt, will be in general use all over the continent.

That the wireless telephone is destined to revolutionize things in this age is without question. Think of ships being guided and directed on the seas by wireless and lives being saved on board ships where no doctor is at hand, through being able to wire advice to attendants. Ships travelling across the ocean are now equipped and concerts are given by the Tropical Radio Company, and thus travellers are enabled to listen to grand opera or symphony orchestras as rendered in our large cities. It is on record that upon one occasion Caruso sang and the radiophone transmitted his voice for a distance of over 500 miles where the American fleet was stationed, and it is said that never before had Caruso's voice sounded to such advantage, distance lending enchantment.

According to wireless engineers at High River wireless station, this location is extraordinarily favorable for radio work and considered better than any other location where stations are existing in North America, this being proved by the wonderful results obtained in receiving telegraph messages from a distance of 6,000 miles, and what is considered a world record for a radiophone has been accomplished at High River at a distance of 3,400 miles. In the meantime, Mr. Bert L. Perry, an enterprising electrical engineer at Edmonton, is endeavoring to arrange for the opening up of wireless stations and telephone systems of very high power up in Northern Alberta at points that are now practically inaccessible owing to the great distances beyond railway transportation. The plan is to supply a radiophone receiving apparatus to people living in remote spots at a certain rental or cost, and each day they will be supplied with a brief record of world wide events. In this manner, residents at Fort Norman and other remote places will have a knowledge of what is going on each day in the outside world. The cost of such equipment will not be expensive. We learn that Mr. Grant, upon completion of the plant here, is leaving for the north to superintend the design and erection of the equipment to be used in this wonderful scheme of modern communication.

The wireless station was established here with the main object of communicating up to distances of 200 miles or more, and it is expected that the distance can be increased to 350 miles.

ALBERTA AVERAGE FOR WHEAT THIS YEAR ABOUT 11 BUSHELS

Alberta will average eleven bushels of wheat to the acre, according to the present estimates of the provincial government. There are some 4,477,000 acres in wheat this year, an advance of twelve per cent. over last year. While the average of wheat to the acre in certain sections has been exceptionally good this year, the drouth areas have brought down the general average.

Oats will, it is estimated, run 41 bushels to the acre over the entire province, and barley 24 bushels.

HOME OF POISON GAS IN GERMANY DESTROYED IN AN EXPLOSION

More Than 1,000 People Killed in Terrible Disaster at the Chemical Products Plant at Oppau.

Mayence, Germany, Sept. 22nd.—French troops and volunteer workers toiled through the night in the ruins of the Badische Anilline Co's war-born chemical plant at Oppau, where hundreds of workmen were killed by an explosion yesterday morning. Estimates of the number of dead ranged as high as 1,000 early today, but definite figures were obviously impossible. More than 300 bodies had been recovered, however, and it was known that at least 1,600 persons were injured by the blast.

Oppau was virtually swept away, and the explosion buried desolation over a wide district on the west bank of the Rhine, between Mannheim and Frankenthal.

The scene of the explosion was more than three miles from Mannheim but every window of that city was shattered by the concussion. The shock was felt in towns 30 miles away. An investigation of the explosion has been ordered by the authorities, but those who have visited the ruins declare there is little upon which a finding can be based.

Order is being maintained in the town and vicinity by French soldiers, that district being within the French zone of occupation.

The base of the French forces in that region is at Ludwigshafen, on the west bank of the Rhine, from which place the troops were rushed to the scene of the disaster.

This is the second time Oppau has been destroyed. In 1833, a dam burst above the town and the place was swept by a wall of water.

Gen. Degoutte, in command of French forces of occupation, went from this city to Oppau and sent for sanitary staffs of the army on the Rhine. He has organised kitchens to feed the families of victims of the disaster, and the high commissioner has given 76,000 marks to the workers' syndicate to alleviate distress.

INQUIRY OPENED

Mayence, Sept. 22.—A late statement issued by the management of the Oppau factory says that the explosion occurred in a reservoir containing 200 tons of ammonia sulphate. It adds that all necessary precautions had been taken during the process of manufacture and storing the product, so that an explosion appeared impossible. An enquiry has been opened.

FRENCH SOLDIERS KILLED

London, Sept. 22.—A dispatch to the London Times from Mayence says that all the members of a party of French soldiers on guard duty at the Oppau works were killed and that a number of French soldiers aboard a French transport unloading in Mannheim harbor were injured.

The dispatch adds that the old palace in Mannheim was badly damaged and that the national theatre was rendered unsafe and performances in it forbidden.

EXPLOSION OF NITROGEN TANK

Berlin, Sept. 22.—The Ludwigshaffen correspondent of the Allgemeine Zeitung says that the disaster at Oppau was caused by the explosion of a nitrogen tank after which four other tanks exploded. In the building at the time were eight hundred workers and all of them, it is feared, perished. Pieces of machinery weighing half a ton were hurled into Ludwigshaffen. The coversepondent learns that a new process of manufacture was being tested in the laboratory. The bourse committee has decided, in view of the lack of details concerning the damage to the Badische Anilinfabrik, plant to omit its stock from the official list.

HOME OF POISON GAS

London, Sept. 22.—The name of Badische works has an evil sound in allied ears," says the Daily Mail, for there the first poison used during the war was produced and throughout the war, chlorine, phosgene and lachrymatory gas were manufactured there for the Germans. The works did more than any other German industrial concern to prolong the war by remarkable achievements in supplying high explosives. They were severely damaged in the course of twenty-nine raids which the French and British made on Mannheim, one of the chief objectives of the allied bombing squadrons. The Badische works are recognized as the largest explosive concern in the world. More than ten thousand persons were employed there before the war and recently between fifteen and eighteen thousand. The concern has wide ramifications in the German copper, coal and sugar industries.

Mannheim, Germany, Sept. 23.—Desolation and ruins alone remain of what was once the flourishing town of Oppau. The town had 6,500 residents, of which a majority of the men engaged in the chemical works were killed or wounded. Soldiers in French uniforms are clearing away the wreckage, picking up the dead and injured as after a big battle.

Eleven hundred dead and 4,000 injured is the latest estimate of the disaster yesterday, which caused greater numbers of casualties in the Mannheim-Ludwigschafen district than the four years of war.

Thirty-six hours after the explosion, from the gaping, funnel-like hole where the Bdische works formerly stood, there are still to be heard the moaning cries of the wounded, while soldiers search for possible survivors. Twenty-five hundred of the injured are reported to have passed through the hospitals of the surrounding cities.

The vast crater is slowly filling with water and it may never be known how many victims found a grave there. The firemen and relief workers have not yet been able to discard their gas masks.

SIR ROBERT BORDEN FOR JUDGESHIP IN WORLD COURT

Sir Robert Borden is Canada's candidate for Judge of the World Court, for which the elections are now in progress. The great problem is to apportion the judgeship in a manner which will give stability to the court, which requires the confidence of the great powers, and at the same time give the small powers a representation which will relieve the court from charges of being an instrument too greatly dominated by the big nations.

BARN BURNED

(Innisfail Province)

Mr A. J. Crack, living at Antler Hill, a short distance north-east of town, had the misfortune on Monday afternoon to lose his barn and all its contents by fire. There was no one at home at the time the blaze broke out and no one knows just how it started. Mr. Crack was in town at the time. Shortly after noon Mrs. Crack went over to the home of a neighbor and on her arrival there was met with the information that the barn was in flames. Men threshing on another farm near by rushed to the scene, but could do practically nothing. Mr. and Mrs. Crack had been living in the barn, which was a comparatively new one, pending the completion of their new house, and all their household goods and a quantity of finish lumber, etc., stowed in the building were destroyed. The loss is in the neighborhood of $5,000, with but $2,500 Insurance.

S. O. S. FOR THE DOCTOR

A woman sat rocking her baby one Saturday at sundown in the steamship Venetian, homeward bound in the Bay of Biscay, from Alexandria. For a week past she had nursed her dying child, and there was no doctor on board.

The grey outline of a man-of-war appeared in the distance, and a wireless message was sent asking for help. The war vessel flashed back a reply. The Venetian stopped, the war vessel drew to within a quarter of a mile, and in spite of the heavy swell a lifeboat put out to her.

Passengers on the Venetian watched their progress breathlessly as the little boat swung up and down in the trough of the sea. At length the side of the Venetian was reached, and the man whose help was so sorely needed mounted a rope ladder prepared for him. The baby's life was saved. The name of the baby was Elizabeth. The name of the warship was the Queen Elizabeth.

Some time ago James Aruthur a fireman of the Canadian Pacific liner Monmouth, was attacked in mid-ocean with severe internal hemorrhage. He owed his life to wireless. The Monmouth carried no surgeon, but her commander secured wireless communication with the Allan liner Hesperian, gave details of the man's symptoms, and received daily prescriptions from the doctor on board the Hesperian. The fireman was well on the road to recovery when he reached Montreal.

The captain of a tramp steamer in the Gulf of Mexico was taken ill with ptomaine poisoning. With death staring him in the face on account of inadequate medical aid, he decided to call by wireless for assistance from a naval station many miles away.

A liner 700 miles farther away picked up the call, and the ship's surgeon made haste to reply with the necessary prescription, which was then filled from the tramp steamer's medicine chest, and the captain recovered.

The mail-packet was crossing from Ostend to Dover, and one of the passengers, donning his overcoat in half a gale, put his shoulder-joint out, and was in great pain. A wireless message was sent from the vessel to Ostend and thence to Dover for a surgeon to meet the boat, and on arrival at the Admiralty Pier the passenger was promptly attended to.

BLIND TOMMY

From his appearance no one would ever have guessed that Tommy was blind. His eyes are just as bright and clear as any boy's could be. He could hit a mark or strike a ball better than any of his playmates. Mother was the one who could tell you most about his blindness, which some folks thought didn't amount to anything. It was quite a serious matter for her.

There was something very strange about it. Tommy seemed to see a piece of pie right through the pantry doors or a slice of cake in a tin box that was shut up in a dark closet. He could see the boys playing ball half a mile away; and he could see his special chum, Charlie Banks, with a fishing rod over his shoulder, almost before he turned around the corner of the street. Yet he never could see the ash pan get out by the door for him to empty, though he stumbled over it half a dozen times through the day. As for the coal bucket, which Tommy was supposed to keep filled for mother—and every boy knows that no mother, with a good, stout boy of her own, ought ever to lift a bucket of coal—Tommy never seemed to see it as it stood by the cellar stairs.

There were other things that Tommy could not see. The garden walks might be green with straying grass or the flower beds with weeds, the lawn might sadly need a shearing, but blind Tommy would go whistling away and presently his voice would be heard shouting and laughing in busy play with the other children.

Queer about Tommy's blindness, wasn't it? Do you suppose any doctor could cure it with some pills and powders or with a pair of spectacles?

Cooling Breezes at the Golf Links of St. Andrew's

While the continent as a whole has been sweltering under a pitiless sun that has kept the mercury around the hundred mark, St. Andrews-by-the-Sea, known as the Newport of Canada, has been blessed with delightful days. The temperature of this popular resort on Passamaquoddy Bay in New Brunswick, has averaged 70 degrees F. On July first the mercury stood at 62. This fact has drawn many visitors to St. Andrew's and the hotels are thronged with a gay crowd which, added to the Canadian smart set whose palatial cottages overlook the Bay, makes the Canadian Newport a lively place.

Like its namesake in old Scotland, St. Andrew's is noted for its excellent golf links. These are laid out on a spit of land known as Joe's Point which projects into the blue bay and is swept by sea breezes at every hour. Golfers are to be found enjoying the course at all hours and many of the foursome include world famous players.

Bowling on the green is another attraction at St. Andrew's. This is a sport little known south of the border, but so popular at St. Andrew's that the green is lighted by electricity at night and keenly contested matches vie with the fine dancing floor of the Casino as an evening pleasure.

Bathing in Katy's Cove affords safe delight to young and old, while the waters of the Bay lure sailors of all water craft to join in the weekly sailing and motor boat races.

The motor roads in the vicinity are in fine condition and an afternoon run from the old town of St. Andrew's out over the hard packed road to the wooded heights above St. Croix and then on to St. Stephen is a joy that never palls.

GRANUM FARMER BEAT UP GRANUM EDITOR

—Politics in the U.F.A. is not without exciting features. There has been considerable turmoil in the provincial riding of Claresholm ever since the defeat of the U.F.A. candidate, Mrs. McKinney, by T. C. Milnes, running as an independent farmer. Last week, the U.F.A. local of Claresholm repudiated Mr. Milnes and refused him a membership.

This week, Editor Salton, of the Granum Advertiser, a newspaper published in the riding, was made the victim of an assault by Jacob Russel, a farmer of the district, which was aggravated by an article which had appeared in the Advertiser, dwelling upon U.F.A. matters. Mr. Russel was taken to the district court at Macleod, where he was fined $30 and $15 costs by Judge Jackson, of Lethbridge. The editor was considerably beaten up by Mr. Russel.

These two incidents have created considerable stir in U.F.A. circles in the southern riding.

WARMING UP

The political pot is showing signs of increasing heat. However, it always needs the announcement of day and date to bring things to the necessary boiling point.

The U.F.A. Convention here on Friday will be an event of much more than local interest, although, as we have stated in these columns previously, there is not the same interest that there would have been if Dr. Clark had not voiced his difference of opinion with Leader Crerar. From present appearances, the U.F.A. Convention is likely to be a fairly open field for the various contestants. To say that there will not be any wire pulling is to assume that human nature has undergone a radical change in recent times. In the past, men have usually been keen for a nomination if it was presumed that the selection might carry with it a reasonably sure thing.

After the victories of the recent provincial campaign, the Farmers might be pardoned for assuming that their convention will name, not merely the candidate, but the member of the next parliament of Canada for this riding. Even at that, however, there is many a slip between the cup and the lip.

Dr. Clark's intentions have not been announced yet, but there is reason to believe that he has not entirely given up the idea of entering as a contestant. A great many of the electors will await his decision with interest. Our faith in the Doctor's ability to make things interesting in an election campaign any time is very strong.

The intention of the Liberals is a mute question. As for the Government supporters, the man who runs away with the idea that Premier Meighen has no friends in the Red Deer riding is laboring under a delusion.

When the lists are finally closed the chances are three, if not four, contestants will face the starter in this riding. An entirely unprecedented number of candidates will probably be found throughout the entire Dominion.

THE KENNY CASE

The outcome of the trial of the Kenny case, before the Supreme Court last week, has been a source of wifdespread satisfaction to the people of Red Deer. Mr. Kenny has been one of the most discussed individuals in our midst, and needless to say, there have been several very ugly rumors circulated. As a rule people are prone to pass judgment on almost anything, even without any knowledge whatever of the facts of the case.

It is difficult to estimate the type of mind which controls a firm with the pretentions of the Terminad Grain Co. and prompts it to institute criminal proceedings against a man without any more warrant for doing so than Mr. Justice Hyndman was able to find in the evidence. The acton gives the appearance of a determined effort to pass the buck somewhere.

An outstanding feature of the case was the incisiveness with which the presiding Justice penetrated the mass of details submitted in the evidence and grasped the principles underlying the case.

Needless to say The News is specially gratified at the outcome of the case in view of the prominent position which Mr. Kenny has held on the staff of this paper for the past seven months. The people of Red Deer are gratified that one of the citizens has not been as bad as he has been painted. Society is so constituted that the criminal act of one is bound to reflect to some degree on all.

The case emphasizes the need of some revision in the administration of our criminal law. In the great majority of cases the accused are not put to undue inconvenience, consistent with the proper discipline of wrong doers. But when a man can be put under arrest and compelled to carry a $12,000 bail bond for eight months on an action which the presiding judge states should never have been started, there is something not altogether right.

In Kenny's case he would have been kept in confinement during this time if it had not been for the friends who were willing to stand as his bondsmen. Probably, however, the criticism should be directed, not against the legal practices, but against the perversity of individuals who will take advantage of the law to perpetrate persecution instead of prosecution. Some day a method may be found of correctly estimating the mental attitude of those who make accusations in our Courts.

THE SCHOOL FAIR

The holding of the School Fair in our midst next Friday is an event of much more than passing importance. There has not been the blare of trumpets that are incidental with so many of the special occasions, but true merit cannot always be estimated by the amount of noise that is made.

The boys and girls of this district, representing many of our rural schools, have been making steady preparation for months, and this Fair means a great deal to them. It will have an important effect in developing their abilities to qualify as the leaders in agriculture, horticulture and the homely arts, later on.

It is the duty of our citizens to turn out to the School Fair next Friday and encourage the children as well as those who are giving bountifully of their time and talents in encouraging the boys and girls in friendly competition.

THE SUPREME COURT

Red Deer was honored last week in having as the presiding Justice at the Supreme Court sittings, the Honorable Mr. Justice Hyndman, who has recently been appointed to the new Appellate Court. The position that he held last spring as chairman of the Government Commission appointed to investigate the grain trade gave him experience in that connection that was valuable in at least one case that was before the Court. Spectators at the Court were very favorably impressed with the able manner in which the Justice conducted the affairs of the Court.

W. E. Payne, the local barrister, is to be congratulated on the success which attended his efforts at this Court. It is not often that one counsel is successful in having two cases withdrawn from the jury and dismissed at one brief sitting of a Supreme Court. Mr. Payne won both cases by his cross examination. It is a demonstration of the fact that the good lawyers are not all found in the large cities.

Canadians have reason to be proud of the Judicial system in vogue here, and the fact that the accused can almost invariably depend on getting a fair trial. In the recent sittings at least two of the accused appeared before the Court without counsel and were given every consideration by the Court.

Mr. P. H. Russell, Innisfail, was justly complimented by the Justice on the able manner in which he conducted the defence in the Rutledge case, on only a very few hours' notice, having been assigned to the case by the Justice just the day before the hearing. It is the right of every man under the British Constitution to have fair trial. It is our pride and our glory that no matter how heinous the crime may be, this is invariably done.

This was probably the first occasion in the annals of Red Deer Courts that the death sentence has been pronounced, and it is to be hoped that it will be the last time that the malicious taking of human life may make it necessary to exact the extreme penalty, here or elsewhere in this fair land.

HIGH RIVER WIRELESS STATION HEARS LOS ANGELES CONCERT

The Radiophone Promises to Revolutionize Method of Transmitting Long Distance Message—Music Played Thousands of Miles Distant Can Be Heard Distinctly.

(High River Times)

Several citizens of High River had the unique experience during the past month of listening to concerts given by the Los Angeles Symphony orchestra, the sounds being flashed across the continent by the Colin B. Kennedy Company and the De Forest Radio Corporation of California and received at the High River wireless station on a very sensitive radio detector which was imported from England and which is the latest development along this line. A seven-stage amplifier, such as is used at the station here, magnifies signals a hundred times and more than sound times and enables persons assembled in the wireless room to quite distinctly hear music transmitted by the various radiophone concerts located near Los Angeles and San Francisco. The sound waves are sent out into the ether by wireless telephone, and although a lofty range of mountains intervenes, the music is heard as distinctly and as free from interruption as though coming from an adjacent room. It was very interesting to those who had the pleasure of being present on these occasions, and in this connection the wireless expert, Mr. Grant, was courteous itself in making it possible for visitors to hear what might be termed a "wireless concert," for the first time in their lives.

We are informed there are several radiophone companies in the States, and all those interested in the wireless and who have a receiving apparatus can listen free of charge to concerts rendered by these companies. The cost of equipment is not expensive and in time, no doubt, will be in general use all over the continent.

That the wireless telephone is destined to revolutionize things in this age is without question. Think of ships being guided and directed on the seas by wireless and lives being saved on board ships where no doctor is at hand, through being able to wire advice to attendants. Ships travelling across the ocean are now equipped and concerts are given by the Tropical Radio Company, and thus travellers are enabled to listen to grand opera or symphony orchestras as rendered in our large cities. It is on record that upon one occasion Caruso sang and the radiophone transmitted his voice for a distance of over 500 miles where the American fleet was stationed, and it is said that never before had Caruso's voice sounded to such advantage, distance lending enchantment.

According to wireless engineers at High River wireless station, this location is extraordinarily favorable for radio work and considered better than any other location where stations are existing in North America, this being proved by the wonderful results obtained in receiving telegraph messages from a distance of 6,000 miles, and what is considered a world record for a radiophone has been accomplished at High River at a distance of 1,400 miles. In the meantime, Mr. Bert L. Perry, an enterprising electrical engineer at Edmonton, is endeavoring to arrange for the opening up of wireless stations and telephone systems of very high power up in Northern Alberta at points that are now practically inaccessible owing to the great distances beyond railway transportation. The plan is to supply a radiophone receiving apparatus to people living in remote spots at a certain rental or cost, and each day they will be supplied with a brief record of world wide events. In this manner, residents at Fort Norman and other remote places will have a knowledge of what is going on each day in the outside world. The cost of such equipment will not be expensive. We learn that Mr. Grant, upon completion of the plant here, is leaving for the north to superintend the design and erection of the equipment to be used in this wonderful scheme of modern communication.

The wireless station was established here with the main object of communicating up to distances of 200 miles or more, and it is expected that the distance can be increased to 350 miles.

ALBERTA AVERAGE FOR WHEAT THIS YEAR ABOUT 11 BUSHELS

Alberta will average eleven bushels of wheat to the acre, according to the present estimates of the provincial government. There are some 4,477,000 acres in wheat this year, an advance of twelve per cent. over last year. While the average of wheat to the acre in certain sections has been exceptionally good this year, the drouth areas have brought down the general average.

Oats will, it is estimated, run 41 bushels to the acre over the entire province, and barley 24 bushels.

HOME OF POISON GAS IN GERMANY DESTROYED IN AN EXPLOSION

More Than 1,000 People Killed in Terrible Disaster at the Chemical Products Plant at Oppau.

Mayence, Germany, Sept. 22nd.—French troops and volunteer workers toiled through the night in the ruins of the Badische Aniline Co.'s war-born chemical plant at Oppau, where hundreds of workmen were killed by an explosion yesterday morning. Estimates of the number of dead ranged as high as 1,500 early today, but definite figures were obviously impossible. More than 300 bodies had been recovered, however, and it was known that at least 1,500 persons were injured by the blast.

Oppau was virtually swept away, and the explosion hurled desolation over a wide district on the west bank of the Rhine, between Mannheim and Frankenthal.

The scene of the explosion was more than three miles from Mannheim, but every window of that city was shattered by the concussion. The shock was felt in towns 50 miles away.

An investigation of the explosion has been ordered by the authorities, but those who have visited the ruins declare there is little upon which a finding can be based.

Order is being maintained in the town and vicinity by French soldiers, that district being within the French zone of occupation.

The base of the French forces in that region is at Ludwigshafen, on the west bank of the Rhine, from which place the troops were rushed to the scene of the disaster.

This is the second time Oppau has been destroyed. In 1883, a dam burst above the town and the place was swept by a wall of water.

Gen. Degoutte, in command of French forces of occupation, went from this city to Oppau and sent for sanitary staffs of the army on the Rhine. He has organised kitchens to feed the families of victims of the disaster and the high commissioner has given 70,000 marks to the workers' syndicate to alleviate distress.

INQUIRY OPENED

Mayence, Sept. 22.—A late statement issued by the management of the Oppau factory says that the explosion occurred in a reservoir containing 200 tons of ammonia sulphate. It adds that all necessary precautions had been taken during the process of manufacture and storing the product, so that an explosion appeared impossible. An enquiry has been opened.

FRENCH SOLDIERS KILLED

London, Sept. 22.—A dispatch to the London Times from Mayence says that all the members of a party of French soldiers on guard duty at the Oppau works were killed and that a number of French soldiers aboard a French transport unloading in Mannheim harbor were injured.

The dispatch adds that the old palace in Mannheim was badly damaged and that the national theatre was rendered unsafe and performances in it forbidden.

EXPLOSION OF NITROGEN TANK

Berlin, Sept. 22.—The Ludwigshaffen correspondent of the Allgemeine Zeitung says that the disaster at Oppau was caused by the explosion of a nitrogen tank after which four other tanks exploded. In the building at the time were eight hundred workers and all of them, it is feared, perished. Pieces of machinery weighing half a ton were hurled into Ludwigshaffen. The correspondent learns that a new process of manufacture was being tested in the laboratory. The bourse committee has decided, in view of the lack of details concerning the damage to the Badische Anilinfabrik, plant to omit its stock from the official list.

HOME OF POISON GAS

London, Sept. 22.—"The name of Badische works has an evil sound in allied ears," says the Daily Mail, for there the first poison used during the war was produced and throughout the war, chlorine, phosgene and lachrymatory gas were manufactured there for the Germans. The works did more than any other German industrial concern to prolong the war by remarkable achievements in supplying high explosives. They were severely damaged in the course of twenty-nine raids which the French and British made on Mannheim, one of the chief objectives of the allied bombing squadrons. The Badische works are recognized as the largest explosive concern in the world. More than ten thousand persons were employed there before the war and recently between fifteen and eighteen thousand. The concern has wide ramifications in the German copper, coal and sugar industries.

Mannheim, Germany, Sept. 23.—Desolation and ruins alone remain of what was once the flourishing town of Oppau. The town had 6,500 residents, of which a majority of the men engaged in the chemical works were killed or wounded. Soldiers in French uniforms are clearing away the wreckage, picking up the dead and injured as after a big battle.

Eleven hundred dead and 4,000 injured is the latest estimate of the disaster yesterday, which caused greater numbers of casualties in the Mannheim-Ludwigschafen district than the four years of war.

Thirty-six hours after the explosion, from the gaping, funnel-like hole where the Bdische works formerly stood, there are still to be heard the moaning cries of the wounded, while soldiers search for possible survivors. Twenty-five hundred of the injured are reported to have passed through the hospitals of the surrounding cities.

The vast crater is slowly filling with water and it may never be known how many victims found a grave there. The firemen and relief workers have not yet been able to discard their gas masks.

SIR ROBERT BORDEN FOR JUDGESHIP IN WORLD COURT

Sir Robert Borden is Canada's candidate for Judge of the World Court, for which the elections are now in progress. The great problem is to apportion the judgeship in a manner which will give stability to the court, which requires the confidence of the great powers, and at the same time give the small powers a representation which will relieve the court from charges of being an instrument too greatly dominated by the big nations.

BARN BURNED

(Innisfail Province)

Mr. A. J. Crack, living at Antler Hill, a short distance north-east of town, had the misfortune on Monday afternoon to lose his barn and all its contents by fire. There was no one at home at the time the blaze broke out and no one knows just how it started. Mr. Crack was in town at the time. Shortly after noon Mrs. Crack went over to the home of a neighbor and on her arrival there was met with the information that the barn was in flames. Men threshing on another farm near by rushed to the scene, but could do practically nothing. Mr. and Mrs. Crack had been living in the barn, which was a comparatively new one, pending the completion of their new house, and all their household goods and a quantity of finish lumber, etc., stowed in the building were destroyed. The loss is in the neighborhood of $8,000, with but $2,500 insurance.

S. O. S. FOR THE DOCTOR

A woman sat rocking her baby one Saturday at sundown in the steamship Venetian, homeward bound in the Bay of Biscay, from Alexandria. For a week past she had nursed her dying child, and there was no doctor on board.

The grey outline of a man-of-war appeared in the distance, and a wireless message was sent asking for help. The war vessel flashed back a reply. The Venetian stopped, the war vessel drew to within a quarter of a mile, and in spite of the heavy swell a lifeboat put out to her.

Passengers on the Venetian watched their progress breathlessly as the little boat swung up and down in the trough of the sea. At length the side of the Venetian was reached, and the man whose help was so sorely needed mounted a rope ladder prepared for him. The baby's life was saved. The name of the baby was Elizabeth. The name of the warship was the Queen Elizabeth.

Some time ago James Arthur a fireman of the Canadian Pacific liner Monmouth, was attacked in mid-ocean with severe internal hemorrhage. He owed his life to wireless. The Monmouth carried no surgeon, but her commander secured wireless communication with the Allan liner Hesperian, gave details of the man's symptoms, and received daily prescriptions from the doctor on board the Hesperian. The fireman was well on the road to recovery when he reached Montreal.

The captain of a tramp steamer in the Gulf of Mexico was taken ill with ptomaine poisoning. With death staring him in the face on account of inadequate medical aid, he decided to call by wireless for assistance from a naval station many miles away.

A liner 700 miles farther away picked up the call, and the ship's surgeon made haste to reply with the necessary prescription, which was then filled from the tramp steamer's medicine chest, and the captain recovered.

The mail-packet was crossing from Ostend to Dover, and one of the passengers, donning his overcoat in half a gale, put his shoulder joint out, and was in great pain. A wireless message was sent from the vessel to Ostend and thence to Dover for a surgeon to meet the boat, and on arrival at the Admiralty Pier the passenger was promptly attended to.

BLIND TOMMY

From his appearance no one would ever have guessed that Tommy was blind. His eyes are as bright and clear as any boy's could be. He could hit a mark or strike a ball better than any of his playmates. Mother was the one who could tell you most about his blindness, which some folks thought didn't amount to anything. It was quite a serious matter to her.

There was something very strange about it. Tommy seemed to see a piece of pie right through the pantry doors or a slice of cake in a tin box that was shut up in a dark closet. He could see the boys playing ball half a mile away; and he could see his special chum, Charlie Banks, with a fishing rod over his shoulder, almost before he turned around the corner of the street. Yet he never could see the ash pan, set out by the door for him to empty, though he stumbled over it half a dozen times through the day. As for the coal bucket, which Tommy was supposed to keep filled for mother—and every boy knows that no mother, with a good, stout boy of her own, ought ever to lift a bucket of coal—Tommy never seemed to see it as it stood by the cellar stairs.

There were other things that Tommy could not see. The garden walks might be green with straying grass or the flower beds with weeds, the lawn might sadly need a shearing, but blind Tommy would go whistling away and presently his voice would be heard shouting and laughing in busy play with the other children.

Queer about Tommy's blindness, wasn't it? Do you suppose any doctor could cure it with some pills and powders or with a pair of spectacles?

Cooling Breezes at the Golf Links of St. Andrew's

While the continent as a whole has been sweltering under a pitiless sun that has kept the mercury round the hundred mark, St. Andrews-by-the-Sea, known as the Newport of Canada, has been blessed with delightful days. The temperature of this popular resort on Passamaquoddy Bay in New Brunswick, has averaged 70 degrees F. On July first the mercury stood at 62. This fact has drawn many visitors to St. Andrew's and the hotels are thronged with a gay crowd which, added to the Canadian smart set whose palatial cottages overlook the Bay, makes the Canadian Newport a lively place.

Like its namesake in old Scotland, St. Andrew's is noted for its excellent golf links. These are laid out on a spit of land known as Joe's Point which projects into the blue bay and is swept by sea breezes at every hour. Golfers are to be found enjoying the course at all hours and many of the foursome include world famous players.

Bowling on the green is another attraction at St. Andrew's. This is a sport little known south of the border, but so popular at St. Andrew's that the green is lighted by electricity at night and keenly contested matches vie with the fine lancing floor of the Casino as an evening pleasure.

Bathing in Katy's Cove affords safe delight to young and old, while the waters of the Bay lure sailors of all water craft to join in the weekly sailing and motor boat races.

The motor roads in the vicinity are in fine condition and an afternoon run from the old town of St. Andrew's out over the hard packed road to the wooded heights above St. Croix and then on to St. Stephen is a joy that never palls.

GRANUM FARMER BEAT UP GRANUM EDITOR

Politics in the U.F.A. is not without exciting features. There has been considerable turmoil in the provincial riding of Claresholm ever since the defeat of the U.F.A. candidate, Mrs. McKinney, by T. C. Milnes, running as an independent farmer. Last week, the U.F.A. local of Claresholm repudiated Mr. Milnes and refused him a membership.

This week, Editor Salton, of the Granum Advertiser, a newspaper published in the riding, was made the victim of an assault by Jacob Russel, a farmer of the district, which was aggravated by an article which had appeared in the Advertiser, dwelling upon U.F.A. matters. Mr. Russel was taken to the district court at Macleod, where he was fined $30 and $15 costs by Judge Jackson, of Lethbridge. The editor was considerably beaten up by Mr. Russel.

These two incidents have created considerable stir in U.F.A. circles in the southern riding.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN HOUSE FAIR

Had a Beautiful Day and a Fine Show

The Rocky Mountain House Fair is always improving. There were over 300 more entries this year than in 1920, the arrangements were in good shape, the people had lots of amusement in the miniature midway as well as instruction and pleasure in viewing the exhibits, there was baseball and a dance especially for the young people, while the weather on Tuesday, the main day, was delightful, and there was a large attendance. The energetic directors this year have cleared and levelled a large open space for judging, for the showing of horses and for baseball, which has added much to the convenience and usefulness of the grounds. The Rocky Mountain House Fair, after the judging, screens its cooking, ladies' work, children's work, and like exhibits with chicken wire, a measure of protection which might well be adopted by more pretentious fairs.

There was a pretty fair showing of horses and an excellent exhibit of cattle, some nice thoroughbreds being shown by Chalmers & Borstad, Hardie, Ellenburgh and other local exhibitors. Mr. Hugh Lee, of Dovercourt, is back again in the ring, and got five prizes with three nice Percherons; he had the misfortune to lose a $2,000 pure-bred Percheron stallion which would have also cleaned things up. There were some nice sheep, but pigs and poultry were rather scarce except in the children's classes, where there were ten creditable entries for best pair of spring chickens. The grain, roots, and vegetables were, as usual, a very strong display, the entries in size and quality would be very hard to beat. Mrs. Herbert, Alhambra, had tomatoes and sunflowers: the latter were ten feet high and she grew four tons on one-third of an acre with 20 cents worth (one pound) of seed. Mrs. Tom Ogden, of Bingley, was again to the fore. Mrs. Ogden's long and serious illness not having prevented the family from producing the usual prize-winning garden stuff. The ladies' work and domestic work were a good showing, though the cooking was not so plentiful as usual, except in the children's classes. The schools' work was one of the great features of the show: Oras, as usual, was probably to the front with the pretty work of its clever Finn pupils, but Northup B.D., near Condor, Mr. C. L. Huskins teacher, gave them a good run, if they did not equal them. In the open exhibit of grain and roots shown on the school grounds, Northup got 7 firsts, a second and three thirds, while the work in other classes of Dale Blair, Julio, A. and P. Bartecsko won seven more prizes. The vegetable collections, the baking, the maps, drawing and writing, and the domestic work and woodwork, were very creditable, indeed, to the girls and boys. The Secretary's special for the best entry form of entries was won by Mr. Jas. Horne on the main point, of convenience, but Northup S. D. ran him a close second. Mr. Driscoll had a fine showing of ladies ready-to-wear and coats.

DR. CLARK GIVES ILLUSTRATIONS OF MOVEMENT TO REACTION

In Reply to Mr. Crerar, Says the Progressive Leader Unconscious of What Is Great National Peril.

SUMMARY OF CONTROVERSY

The controversy between Dr. Clark and T. A. Crerar commenced on Sept. 14, when following the gathering of the Progressive party leaders in Edmonton, Dr. Clark wrote to Mr. Crerar definitely severing his connection from the Progressive party, on the ground that he would not stand for dictation, nor could he support H. W. Wood's theories of group government. Dr. Clark stated that he could not accept a nomination in the Red Deer riding on the Progressive ticket.

To this letter Mr. Crerar replied on Sept. 19 to the effect that group government was not a part of the program of the Progressive party, nor was class legislation or class domination, which Dr. Clark had feared so much as an outcome of the Farmer movement. He greatly regretted Dr. Clark's leaving the Prgressive party.

In a letter made public below, Dr. Michael Clark, M.P. for Red Deer, contributes further to the controversy between himself and T. A. Crerar, by replying to the letter which he received from Mr. Crerar a few days ago.

DR. CLARK'S REPLY

Dr. Clark's letter follows:

My Dear Crerar: My letter, to which you have now replied, was made brief by intention to avoid troubling you, if possible, with extra controversy, when your hands are already full. However, your emphatic endorsation of my opposition to the "economic group" in politics, and to class legislation and attempted domination, is worth very much at this time, and was due to the public.

Your personal references are too generous and I assure you I appreciate your kindness much. I might very well have closed this letter at this point, but that you take up a controversial position, which it is incumbent on me to meet at once as you honestly seem to me to be unconscious of what is really a great national peril. You say the question I have raised is one of organization rather than policy. In my judgment, no one could be the victim of a more erroneous belief. It has been stated excathedra that to have a group it is necessary to have an interest on which to found it, and this interest must be an economic interest. Now what is the inevitable conclusion from this language? Most obviously that "the group" is in politics for the express purpose of pressing its own economic interests. This is the very thing of which you say Canada has had too much in the past, and to which you are unalterably opposed.

THREE ILLUSTRATIONS

Now I only want to give you three illustrations of the extent to which our public life is already being deleteriously affected by what I believe to be a determined movement towards reaction.

In the recent election in Alberta, it is beyond doubt that farmers were canvassed by farmers on the express ground that the return of a farmers' government would result in the increase of the price of farm produce. It is very ridiculous, of course, and disillusionment will be swift and certain, but it is necessary to show the working of the "economic interest" idea.

IN A WIDER FIELD

An illustration in a wider field is found in the political position of the Grain Growers' Grain company. There can be no shadow of doubt that the shareholders of that company are in politics as a group. It was the knowledge of this fact that prompted the institution of a recent grain inquiry with the motives of which I have no sympathy, insofar as they were political. But you may take it from me there is a grave doubt, widely permeating impartial minds, whether it was wise for this company to join with other corporations to stop the inquiry. Be this as it may, if evidence is subsequently forthcoming, or even the suspicion widely held that the Grain Growers' Grain company is as good at "farming the farmer" as other corporations, is it not certain that much damage would accrue to policies, which you and I believe are vital to the best interests of the nation, and not hurtful to the legitimate interests of any class or individual?

FARMERS AND LABOR

My third illustration is to be found in the fact that a statement has been published within the last week that a gentleman's agreement exists between the Independent Labor party and the farmers, by which the former are to lie low on the tariff, according to the prime minister the vital issue of the election, while the farmers are to wink one eye at least, as the Independent Labor party proceed to campaign for nationalization of banks, state insurance against unemployment, old age pensions and a number of other similar objects which would do nothing for the farmer except add to his already almost intolerable burden of taxation. This is no matter of organization, but a detestable log-rolling policy, of which I am heartily glad to be free.

You say truly that you and I have supported certain policies in common. We have, but "group government" was not one of them. We have, on the other hand, denounced protection first. When we had finished, he hopped down, seemed to say that the water was good, and then in turn ranged himself under the edge of the trough, and the other reached up for the drink he had earned. When he was satisfied, they trotted away together, as well contented as any man could be who had met a difficult problem and solved it.

come a somewhat doubtful platform, for it will not be possible, I imagine, to prevent discussion from drifting some distance from what seemed likely to be its course. Under these circumstances, further co-operation at the moment is out of the question.

I am taking advantage of this letter which I shall send to the press, to let our friends throughout the country know that I am cancelling engagements already formed, and not forming others. Believe me, my dear Crerar,

Yours very sincerely,
MICHAEL CLARK.

MR. WOOD SAYS LITTLE

When H. W. Wood, president of the U.F.A., was shown a copy of Dr. Clark's reply to Mr. Crerar, after a very careful second reading of the letter, he remarked: "As he has not anywhere discussed the principles of the U.F.A., I have nothing to say."

On being asked "Have you nothing to say regarding the reference to the agreement between the Independent Labor party and the farmers?" he replied, "This is the first intimation I ever heard of such an agreement and am sure it does not exist in Alberta."

'NOBODY CARES'; CRIPPLED BOY TAKES OWN LIFE

Pathetic Case of Ernest Jones, 17-Year-Old, One-Legged Lad, Near Rocky Mountain House.

Rocky Mountain House, Alta., Sept. 22.—"Nobody cares for me; now they won't have to." With these few expressive words scratched with pencil upon a piece of scrap paper, Ernest Jones, 17 years old, was found dying at his home a few miles out of town yesterday afternoon. A .22 calibre rifle lying near his body and a blood shattered hole in his temple indicated the method the young suicide had chosen to end his life.

The body was found by his mother when returning to the house. She immediately called in aid and the boy was rushed to Rocky Mountain House, but he died before reaching town. Dr. Miller was called and pronounced life extinct.

Young Jones was a cripple, having had his leg amputated some time ago. Although in impetuous and evil times, he was given over to fits of despondency, brought about mainly by reason of his incapacity. It is likely an inquest will be held.

TWO WISE DOGS

The incident took place one hot day at a watering trough for horses. Two dogs, water-spaniels, were trotting along, when they came to the place, and they were panting for a cooling drink. But neither was tall enough to reach the trough; and they talked the matter over, as dogs will, and wondered way they had not been treated with as much consideration as horses. Presently they solved the problem. One of them ranged himself under the edge of the trough, and the other, resting his forefeet upon his companion's back, was able to reach into the pool and quench his first. When he had finished, he hopped down, seemed to say that the water was good, and then in turn ranged himself under the edge of the trough, and the other reached up for the drink he had earned. When he was satisfied, they trotted away together, as well contented as any man could be who had met a difficult problem and solved it.

Rutledge Condemned To Death

WILL BE HANGED AT FORT SASKATCHEWAN JANUARY 11TH.

Rex v Russell

At the opening of Court on Thursday morning, Mr. Hugh Macdonald, K.C., of Edmonton, arose and stated that he had been requested by the Deputy Attorney General to attend and produce the file of correspondence between counsel and the Department in the Russell case, as the Deputy Attorney-General understood that the good faith of the Department had been impeached by Mr. Cameron's statement, and that the allegation that the accused had made personal application for the depositions of the evidence given at the preliminary trial and had been promised them free of charge. Mr. Macdonald was proceeding to read from the files when Mr. Payne objected to Mr. Macdonald going on in the absence of Mr. Russell and Mr. Cameron.

Mr. Macdonald said that he was making no motion nor asking any action. He simply wanted to set the Department right.

The Judge allowed him to go on, and Mr. Macdonald read from the files the efforts of Mr. Russell and the Department also to get them from Police Magistrate MacLeod and the stenographer of his court the transcript of the evidence, which convinced the Judge that Mr. Browning had acted in good faith throughout and had made every effort to get them for Mr. Russell; "no excuse can be given" for their non-production, Mr. Browning said in his letter regretting that they would not be ready for this trial.

Mr. Macdonald said the Crown had now set down the case for trial, and was ready to go on with Mr. Russell's case without the depositions; or were willing to consent to adjournment to January, or were willing to request an adjournment to any suitable future date.

Mr. Payne communicated with Mr. Russell, but he would not act without word to Mr. Cameron, and the case was set over until Mr. Cameron could be heard from.

Rex v Rusnack

Stephen Rusnack elected to be tried without a jury, and conducted his own defence. This young man was charged with entering a Chinese restaurant at Mirror, holding up the proprietor and cook with a revolver while he rifled the till. He was alleged to have had a confederate with him, but only one of them was caught. Yee Lee, the first witness called, broke down in giving his evidence, owing to limited English and Charlie Chuck was sworn in as interpreter. The hold-up occurred after midnight on the night of August 24-25. Yee Lee said the accused and another man entered and while one of them held him up with a revolver, the other went around the counter and took bills from the till to the amount of $35. Yee Sam, his cook, had been called from the kitchen, but driven back at the point of a gun. Mr. Sears, operating a poolroom in Mirror, and Mr. Iteman, of the hotel there, gave evidence of the presence of Rusnack in Mirror on the day before the offence, which he categorically denied, although he failed to produce any evidence of an alibi. His Lordship questioned the accused at some length about his carnings and war service. His answers appearing rather unsatisfactory, the case was adjourned for investigation of his record.

Mr. Quigg found that accused had served overseas and was a member of the G.W.V.A., he told the Judge in the morning. The Judge said that the holding up of an armed man with a revolver, especially if the man was disposed to show fight, might very easily lead to murder. He was surprised that a soldier should not know something of the rights of others, would be guilty of such a noffence. He would sentence him to five years in the penitentiary at hard labor.

Rex v Rutledge

Joseph John Rutledge was charged with the murder of his wife, Ethel Rutledge, and four children—Ernest, Mary, Ivy and Florence—at his farm 6½ miles southeast of Innisfail, on June 18. A jury consisted of Messrs. Frank Michener, A. T. England, A. G. Bulleck, A. H. Heywood, Wm. Doig and C. A. Trimble.

Mr. D. F. Russell, of Innisfail, was assigned by the Court to defend the case, and took it up at short notice.

This case took up the whole of Wednesday and disclosed one of the most gruesome and horrible stories ever heard in an Alberta Court. Mr. Quigg, for the Crown, opened with a brief address to the jury, setting forth the main details of the case. It appeared that the accused had made a pact with his wife, in which they mutually agreed to kill all their children and then commit suicide. Subject to His Lordship's ruling, he submitted that the law in suicide agreements was that if one of the parties to the agreement survived he was guilty of the murder of the other. In pursuance of this agreement the prisoner and his wife had set fire to their own house, the whole family being in it at the time. The wife had gone through with her part of the agreement, but the man's compassion had been aroused, he had rescued one of the children, and upon returning to the house had failed in pluck, and in turn caused himself.

Vera Mabel Shaw, the prisoner's sister-in-law, a girl of 19, said she was living with the family. The household included the prisoner and his wife and six children, herself and the infant child, whom she had borne to Rutledge. She had had some conversation with them on the night of the 17th, but is concerned the cattle only. She slept downstairs and had been awakened by her brother-in-law calling her about daylight telling her to wrap the baby up in a blanket and not to go to sleep again. She had heard screaming by several voices and tried to open the stairs' door. Mr. Rutledge had come down carrying Poppy. They were on fire and the prisoner had put the burning clothes out with a pail of water and said the rest were all dead. He said he had helped Ethel to do it, and in reply to her shocked exclamations had said she knew she had wanted it done. She spoke of the prisoner having occasional fits.

Cross-examined by Mr Russell, as to whether the prisoner had ever acted queerly, she said he had never done so except during occasional sick spells. He had threatened to shoot himself once, but subsequently admitted reluctantly that this was when the prisoner was with her, rather leaving the impression that she had given way to him under duress. She testified that Mr. Parker, "an inspector of some kind," had been to the house on the previous evening, and understood that he had threatened to remove the children.

Mrs. Robert Kerr, the next witness, was acquainted with the whole household. They kept a chicken ranch. She had been awakened between 3:30 and 4 o'clock by a rap on the door. The prisoner had appeared carrying the child Poppy. He had told her that he and his wife had put their house on fire. He had told her the bed was soaked in gasoline before being fired. She thought the prisoner had always seemed a very affectionate husband and father.

Robert Kerr testified to being awakened by Rutledge with the child Poppy about 4 a.m. by a rap on the door. The prisoner had said "This is all that's left of the Rutledge fire." The prisoner did not think the child was burnt, but he, witness, had removed its clothes and found it badly burnt. Leaving the child with his wife, he had gone over to the Rutledge place, which he found burnt to the ground, with Vera Shaw standing with her baby 30 or 40 yards from it. He had returned and called for the police and gone for help, returning with Sergt. Broadribb, Inspector Parker, Dr. Turner and Rev. Orton. He had worked with the prisoner on roadwork in July, 1920, and helped him when he had a fit.

Sergt. Broadribb, of the A.P.P., stated that at Kerr's house after being charmed with the usual formula, the prisoner had told him Mrs. Rutledge had set fire to the building, himself assisting. He had described the soaking of the bed with coal oil and gasoline. Inspector Parker had taken down in his presence a detailed statement, which had been signed by prisoner, Kerr and himself. This statement was produced and read in court. Subsequently he had spent about four hours searching the premises, finding remains of firearms (also produced) and bodies. A note had been found on the prisoner, in the pocket of his overalls, which was also produced. The wording of this note was: "We were happy once, before you ruined our lives. We will be happy now. May God forgive you. We do. J. J. and Ethie."

The confessions stated that the Rutledges feared the children would be taken away and that they had decided to do away with them rather than have them taken. They had been discussing drowning but feared they would be interrupted. They didn't have shells enough to shoot them, so they decided on burning the house and the wife told him to get a stick so that he could club any of the children who gave trouble. They soaked the bed in gasoline and coal oil, and the wife touched the match. One child, Poppy, fell out of bed. Moved by compassion he took her outside. He then returned to carry out the agreement, but his courage failed. He had clubbed at least two of the children.

Remains of three firearms were produced and a discussion ensued between witness and prisoner's counsel as to whether one of them, a double-barrelled shotgun, was at half-cock or full cock. Witness claimed that the fire had prevented the point from being settled. Mr. Russell established by this witness that the shell in the shotgun, while presumably discharged, could not have been discharged by the impact of the hammer.

Mr. Parker, an inspector of the Neglected Children Department, Edmonton, gave evidence of visiting the house in consequence of complaints he had received of the moral atmosphere being unsuitable for children. He had not threatened to remove the children but had suggested to Miss Shaw that if she let the Department take her child it would make it easier for her to make a fresh start where she was not known.

The next witness, Dr. Geo. Wagner, of Innisfail, who gave evidence of having the prisoner under observation before the preliminary, was cross-examined at some length by prisoner's counsel. He asked him a series of technical questions as to the diagnosis of insanity. There were many forms of insanity without any visible lesion of the brain. Paretic Dementia might be one of these, as also Melancholia and Inertia. An excessive venery might cause these. Poor memory was not an invariable symptom of insanity. There were works on mania known as Periodic or Circular. A blow on the head might cause insanity. He thought it remotely possible but not probable that concussion caused by a blow on the solar plexus. Counsel asked His Lordship for a fiat for X-ray pictures of prisoner's head. This was arranged for, and court adjourned at 12:30.

On the resumption of proceedings at 2 o'clock, the first witness called was Dr. B. R. Mooney, resident physician at Ponoka mental hospital. He testified that during the six weeks that the prisoner had been under his charge he had been apparently normal. It was true that he did not seem to worry very much in view of the gravity of the charges against him, and seemed to accept his position philosophically. In reply to counsel he said he had not noticed any fits.

Constable English, A.P.P., Red Deer, gave evidence of the prisoner's condition during the last day or two. Dr. MacKenzie had been called and had prescribed for him. He had had a decided nervous breakdown, but did not see any symptoms otherwise.

The X-ray plates being now available, were produced and Dr. Wagner recalled to comment on them. These showed no lesion of any kind, and prisoner's counsel recalled what the doctor had previously said about a visible brain-lesion being no necessary symptom of insanity.

This closed the evidence for the defence, and Mr. Quigg rose to address the jury. He said the case appeared to be a very simple one. The burden of the defence had been an attempt to plead insanity. Commenting on this, he said no evidence of previous insanity had been adduced. Fits were not an evidence of irresponsibility. He desired to draw special attention to the note which had been produced, the prisoner's intention having been, apparently, to leave it for his sister-in-law. It was signed by husband and wife jointly. If the man were adjudged insane, on the ground of suicidal intention, then it was necessary to assume that his wife was also insane. It was not likely that insanity would develop suddenly and without warning in two people at the same time. He reminded the jury of the "unwritten law" ready said as to the law governing suicide pacts. The note proved the act to have been too deliberate to suggest frenzy. This cold-blooded deliberation was also suggested by the clothing which had been left in an outbuilding for Miss Shaw and her baby. There was proof of irresponsibility was on the defence. There had not been one word of evidence to show that he was otherwise than sane. The doctors had had him under observation for six weeks each, and to both of them he had appeared quite normal. There was a sense in which every man who committed a crime was more or less insane. But that did not begin to prove the degree of insanity which could be admitted as a defence for a crime like this one. The use of a club referred to in the prisoner's own confession was perhaps a redeeming feature. He spoke of having clubbed at least one child to save it from needless suffering. He had no hesitation in asking them for an unqualified verdict of "guilty."

Mr. Russell reminded the jury that he had taken the case at very short notice, with scant opportunity to marshal evidence. He had only had one conference with the prisoner, lasting about fifteen minutes. He went on to discuss the evidence of Dr. Wagner, as to symptoms of various forms of insanity, especially transitory frenzy. He reviewed the "three separate manifestations of weakness of intellect"—the prisoner's threat to shoot himself, his rotting lost in the bush when on road work, and the actions of the present tragedy. He thought purely circumstantial evidence should be allowed more weight when it tended to prove innocence than when it tended to prove guilt. In the case of Inspector Parker's visit, he thought the evidence was very slight. The Inspector had his trade, and doubtless used the set phrases of his trade, a worthy one as it was. In spite of his denial of using threats, he thought it a reasonable presumption that the Inspector had given them cause to fear that he would separate them from their children. Even if the general case of guilt were conceded, he thought the prisoner might be cleared of the guilt of certain single counts. The wife had had a rifle and the prisoner a shot-gun. The rifle had been fired, but the shot-gun had exploded evidently from the heat of the of firearms (also produced) and bodies. A note had been found on the prisoner, in the pocket of his overalls, which was also produced. The wording of this note was: "We were happy once, before you ruined our lives. We will be happy now. May God forgive you. We do. J. J. and Ethie."

His Lordship, Judge Hyndman began his summing up of the case by saying it was probably the most gruesome and horrible case in the experience of any of them. Every man was presumed to be innocent until proven guilty. There were certain points in the law as it affected murder, which he would point out to the jury. Firstly, an actual death must be clearly proved. Secondly, it must be shown to be the result of the accused's action. In the present case the evidence was abundantly clear. The verdict must be founded on evidence actually produced to the jury, whose duty it was to inhibit from their minds anything in their own personal knowledge unless it was produced in court. The case before them was a simple one, the only question of doubt involved being the one of insanity. The prisoner's confession and the evidence of Vera Shaw left them no option but a verdict of murder, except in one case, which he would presently review. There was in this case a subsidiary domestic tragedy, the question of the prisoner's relations with his sister-in-law, and its effect on the mind of the prisoner and his wife had a tendency to create a feeling almost of admiration, at least in the woman, who preferred to face death rather than the continued disgrace of this scandal. The same might have been said of the prisoner if his courage had not failed.

His Lordship went on to review the matter of how far insanity may be held to excuse a criminal act. He emphasized that even clear proof of insanity was not proof of innocence. In order for a defence to succeed on this ground, it must be proved that the mind of the accused is so far unbalanced that he does not know what he is doing, or does not appreciate that it is a legally wrong action. Short of this even lunatics are held responsible for their action.

His Lordship complimented Mr. Quigg on the extremely fair and able way in which he had presented the evidence. He also desired to thank Mr. D. F. Russell for the clever and able defence he had presented at very short notice. Mr. Russell had taken the case only the previous day at his (Judge's) request, with very little hope of any remuneration, and His Lordship thought he deserved credit for his conduct of it.

The jury returned in about half an hour, and, through their foreman, Mr. Frank Michener, announced a verdict of Guilty.

The judge asked the prisoner if he had anything to say, whereupon Rutledge arose and addressed the court. Had he known, he said, that the appointment Tuesday of Mr. P. H. Russell as his lawyer tied him to keep his mouth shut he would not have consented to it, though he thanked Mr. Russell for his courtesy. There was always a motive behind such a case and, while the jury had known only the real facts which occurred in that room that night they might have brought in a different verdict. He declared his wife was woman and her children were where they were that afternoon: it was the closest he had ever got to murder.

The Judge said that, in common with nearly everyone else, he was sorry for the prisoner; but there was no need of lecturing or moralizing at this stage. The jury had no option, as he saw it, than to bring in a verdict of guilty in the face of the most harrowing details to which they had listened. He was not to judge the case exactly: the law had to be vindicated and must take its course. He had no option but to pass sentence of death. In such sentences, the evidence was most carefully considered at Ottawa before the execution took place, and the authorities there would investigate whether there were any circumstances tending to show that the sentence should not be carried out. He was not holding out hope, however. The sentence of the court was that the prisoner be taken to Fort Saskatchewan jail and kept in custody there until January 11, 1922, when he was to be taken to the place of execution between the hours of 8 a.m. and 10 a.m., and there be hanged by the neck until he was dead. "And may the Lord have mercy on your soul."

HUNTING FOR REVENUE

(Edmonton Bulletin)

The city commissioners recommend to the city council a revision in the taxation system of the city which is in some respects radical. The starting point is taken from the proposed changes is the fact that the single tax system has failed and may as well be given up frankly and formally. That this is a fact has been apparent for some years, in effect ever since real estate ceased to advance in price and began to recede. While lots were an actively marketable commodity at prices tending always upward, nobody cared if the whole revenue of the city was collected from taxes imposed upon them. When they ceased to be in demand the holders became keenly aware that they, and not others, were the parties who had to pay, and that the effect of the single tax was to eat up the value of the property. A few years of declining values threw a vast area of vacant property into the hands of the city, whose owners either could not or would not pay the taxes. At the same time the house-owner discovered that the taxes on his home amounted to a fair rental, while neighbors who had not bought homes were able to rent at rates ridiculously low and were called upon for no taxes. The single tax has accordingly been modified in several respects under pressure of experience, sufficiently so to establish the point that it is not a dependable method of collecting city revenue. There are times when it pays the owner, but they are "boom" times, when any method would do as much. The tax system that is really needed is one that will tax money when things are not booming, when they are even going the other way; and that the single tax failed absolutely and hopelessly to do in Edmonton. For some years a standing problem of the council and the provincial legislature has been to devise a system of taxation that the citizens were willing to submit to, and which would produce the revenue the land tax had failed to bring in.

The changes now proposed are numerous enough and important enough to require detailed consideration at the hands of council and to arouse keen interest among the citizens. The service tax is repudiated, presumably because it has not amounted to much as a revenue producer. It could hardly have turned out otherwise. It originated in the idea that people who did not pay taxes, but who derived benefit from the expenditure of civic money, should be made pay. Naturally they did not want to pay, and said so very forcefully. The tax was accordingly whittled down in amount and restricted in application until there was little prospect that the net returns would cut any large figure in the revenue account. And of the amount it does collect, a good percentage comes out of the pockets of people who also pay taxes on property. As a means of rounding up the untaxed it is a failure.

The proposal is to replace the service tax by the income tax collected in former years. Provided this is made to apply where it should apply, and is not imposed upon those who are already paying in property taxes for all the benefits they get from the city's services, the change would be an improvement. If that is not done it is not worth while making the change. Penalising one person for the benefit of another amounts to the same thing, whatever the name of the particular measure under which it is done.

This year the city utilities are being made to pay taxes, and the proposal is to continue the practice. There is no apparent reason why that should not be done. If every user of the utilities contributed equitably to the cost of running the city's affairs there would be clear ground upon which to claim that the utilities should be run at cost or as near that as would be financially safe. There is no reason why the person who pays no direct taxes should be denied the privilege of contributing something indirectly by way of increased cost for electric light, water and telephone services. Those who do pay direct taxes get back what the increased services cost them in reduced tax bills.

The commissioners would abolish the discount as an inducement for the early payment of taxes, and impose high interest rates upon those who fail to pay up early in the year. That is a course to be pursued with moderation. The city has already gone far in the way of requiring prompt payment. To increase the difficulty of paying during the current year is a questionable policy. The city needs money, but even more it needs to keep from squeezing out the remaining property owners.

The report also suggests that the provincial government be asked to turn over fifty per cent. of the motor car license fees to the city, with half the taxes collectable on theatre tickets, and to give the city power to levy a further fee on automobiles. Hitherto these taxes have been reserved as sources of provincial revenues. Whether the government is prepared to part with the city in full, after which the train is conveyed by barge over Kootenay Lake to Nelson. Creston in the Kootenay Valley is reached over the lines of the Kettle Valley Railway, and after a stay there of three hours the train proceeds to Vancouver, arriving in Victoria by steamer the C.P.R. Directors attend the opening of the new Robinson's Bay Store on Monday, Sept. 19th. Next day they are entertained to luncheon by the officers of the C.P.R. at Vancouver, after which they return East over the mountains, stopping at Revelstoke, Wapta Lake, Lake Louise and Banff. At Calgary on Saturday, the 24th Sept., the officers of the Company hold a luncheon in their honor. The itinerary then proceeds by way of Edmonton, and Saskatoon where the Canadian Club entertains the party at a luncheon on Monday, the 26th Sept.

Edward Wentworth Beatty, President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, was born at Thorold, Ontario, in 1876. He moved to Toronto with his parents when he was ten years of age. He studied in Toronto at the Model School, Upper Canada College, Harbord Street Collegiate Institute, Osgoode Hall, and the University of Toronto. Graduating from the University he began to study law with the firm of McCarthy at Toronto in 1893. In 1901, Mr. Beatty entered the service of the C. P. R. as assistant to the General Counsel; in July, 1905, he became Assistant Solicitor, in 1910, he was General Solicitor, in 1914, he became Chief Counsel and Vice-President. He succeeded Lord Shaughnessy as President of the C. P. R. in 1918. Mr. Beatty takes a great interest in Canadian education, and in addition to being one of the governors of McGill University, is Chancellor of Queen's University at Kingston. He takes a prominent part in many public movements, such as the Navy League.

Senator, the Hon. F. L. Béique, the son of Louis Béique, was born in St. Mathias, Rouville County, Quebec, on May 20th, 1845. Acquiring his education at the College de Ste. Marie de Monnoir, he chose law for his profession, and later on became an LL.D. of Laval University. He was called to the bar in 1868, and made a King's Counsellor for the Province of Quebec in 1879, and for the Dominion of Canada in 1889. Accurate knowledge, sound judgment and clear speaking made him one of the leading lawyers of his period. His brothers in the legal profession have recognized this. From 1891 to 1893 he was Batonnier of the Bar in the district of Montreal. Senator Béique has been engaged as counsel in many celebrated cases.

Sir Herbert Samuel Holt was born in Dublin, Ireland, in 1855, a younger son of William Robert Grattan Holt, who was a member of one of the best-known families in King's County. He was educated at Trinity College in the city of his birth, and took to the profession of a civil engineer. In early manhood he came to Canada, and engaged in railway construction.

It was not long before he became associated with James Ross in building some of the railway lines in Ontario that were subsequently incorporated into the Canadian Pacific system. A little later Mr. Holt found his way to Chicago and to the Canadian Northwest.

"H. S. Holt, James Ross, William Mackenzie and D. D. Mann, formed a syndicate which built the eastern section of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and were awarded the contract for the construction of the Short Line of the C. P. R. from Montreal to St. John, N.B.

Sir Herbert Holt has for long been the president and guiding light of the Montreal Light, Heat and Power company, one of the most successful business institutions in America. He is one of the pioneers of electrical development in Canada, is president of the Royal Bank, and associated with numerous business enterprises.

Sir Augustus Nanton is the son of the late Augustus Nanton, Barrister, of Toronto. He was born in Toronto on May 7th, 1860. He was educated at the Toronto Model School. He entered the brokerage firm established by E. B. Osler in Toronto as a junior partner in 1884. In the same year he went to Winnipeg and established a branch of the business there. In 1898 he became president of the Winnipeg Board of Trade. Later he was appointed president of the Winnipeg Stock Exchange. He holds the very important and influential position of Director and Chairman of the Canadian Committee of the Hudson's Bay Company. Other positions which he has filled are: President of the Manitoba Cartage Co., director Winnipeg St. Railway, director Dominion Bank, director Great West Life Assurance Co., director Toronto General Trusts Corporation. Sir Augustus Nanton has been the promoter of many commercial enterprises, and few in Canada have a better knowledge of the West. He resides in Winnipeg where he is senior partner of the firm of Nanton, Hammond and Nanton. He was knighted on June 4th, 1917. Sir Augustus is interested in boating and was for many years a member of Winnipeg Rowing Club.

A. D. MacTier, who is now Vice-President of the line east of Port Arthur, like his former chief, David McNicoll, was born in Scotland. He came to Canada when a young man and entered the service of the C.P.R. as stenographer in the Baggage Department in 1887, becoming assistant to the Superintendent of Sleeping and Dining Cars in 1889. From 1891 to 1896 he was in the Car Service Stores and Fuel Departments, and from 1896 to 1899 was General Baggage Agent. From 1899 to 1907 he held the position of General Fuel Agent, when he was appointed assistant to the Vice-President. In December, 1912, he was appointed General Manager, Eastern Lines, and in 1918 he became vice-president.

D. C. Coleman, the C. P. R. Vice-President of lines west of Port Arthur, has had a remarkably rapid rise to such a responsible position, but has earned it, for he is known in railway circles as a man of exceptional ability. Born at Charlottetown, Prince, Ontario, in 1879, Mr. Coleman joined the C. P. R. as a clerk in the assistant Engineer's Office at Fort William in 1899. Rising rapidly he was appointed Superintendent at Nelson, B.C., in 1907, and in 1908 was Superintendent of Car Service, Western Lines. In April, 1912, he was appointed General Superintendent of the Manitoba Division at Winnipeg. In 1913 he became General Superintendent at Calgary and in 1916 Assistant General Manager, Western Lines, Winnipeg. In 1918, when Grant Hall left the West to become first Vice-President in Montreal, Mr. Coleman became Vice-President of the Western Lines.

FISH STORY FROM B. C.

Will Pennington, of Dewdney, B.C., formerly of Penhold, in renewing his subscription to The News, tells the following story about fishing and shooting in B.C.:

"I read in the paper that you had been doing some fishing during your vacation. Now when I think of fishing and fishermen around Red Deer it makes me smile. I've fished the Red Deer for over thirty years and once caught a 12-pound maskinonge which gave me a little excitement. When I first came here I thought I was a fisherman but when the big flies began to run in the fall I found I was a rank amateur. However, some Vancouver anglers came up to fish, and after seeing them I began to catch on; but the lines and spoons I lost last fall was a caution. Of course if you use heavy tackle you could get them any old way, but true sportsmen use light tackle, a silk line testing 22 to 28 lbs., and a single gut hook attached. Give the cut a chance and he will keep you guessing for sometime.

There is also good shooting and hunting here. The pheasants are plentiful this year, but are very destructive to crops, especially to corn and potatoes. They scratch the potatoes out like fowls; only yesterday a big duck came into the garden. The ducks also are very numerous, but the season for ducks and pheasants does not open until October 15th. There are lots of deer and bear within a couple of miles on the open ranges. If I have good luck fishing or hunting this fall I might send you a picture. Kindly remember me to all my old friends."

W. C. Cotton, a lawyer of Montreal, has been appointed editor of the Maritime Labor Herald, a weekly which is to be published at Glace Bay, N.S., and which the Labor promoters hope to have going in time to take a hand in the coming federal election.

TASK OF LLOYD GEORGE VERY HEAVY

Mr. Lloyd George, in receiving a deputation of the Dingwall council, who presented him with the freedom of the town, said he doubted whether any men recorded on the Dingwall role, including Fox, Gladstone, Rosebery and Chamberlain, has "as hard and insistently strenuous a task" as the one Providence has entrusted to my feeble hands."

"It will take a great deal of getting through; but sometimes when things seem worst, they really are much better," he continued. "I know from the touch and sight of things, comparing them today to a year ago and a year before that, that things gradually are getting better."

"All the same, we must pull together, if we do, it will greatly help the world, for if Great Britain goes down, I do not know what help there is for Europe."

WHAT IS FUN?

By Miskokway

The other day we met a man, a little man, all stooped, a trace of grey around his forehead and a faraway look in his eyes as if he saw his "ship" a-sailing in. He had slaved over his desk, one might say, all his life—a slave to his calling. We asked him: "Where does your fun come in?" "Well, now, I'll tell you about that. The wife and I and the kids have a home we call our own on the outskirts of town, 'tis sure not palatial, but still it's our own, and, talking about fun—well, I'll tell you. When I get home from work—work I said—and feels good and tired and stick my feet up on the front of the stove, and the kids are playing and the wife sewing. I read and yawn and dream and feel 'comfy,' then wander off to bed, and it's a-raining and I can hear it a-tap the shingles and against the window pane while I'm dropping off to sleep—that's fun."

He was a big man, florid faced, puffing a "panatella," but we knew him, so we asked him, "Where does your fun come in?" "Huh!" He looked surprised, so again we reiterated our remark and drifted down towards his —well—it was a Cadillac. "My fun," he says, "is watching that little ticking machine and tape and trying to put one over when I get the chance." "Yes, but don't you ever have any other kind of fun?" "Oh, yes, sure, a cabaret, a show, a game of seven auntie." "But your wife and kiddies?" "Oh, she dances and the nurse tends to the kiddies. Goo-bye, so long." And the chauffeur clipped the curb on the turn and was gone. That's fun.

Billy Brown looked after those two young steers as though his fate depended upon them. For hadn't his dad given them to him to bring along, and said, "Now we'll see what kind of a farmer you will make." Gee, hadn't Billy worked hard all summer on that promise, neglecting the swimming hole and those spots where the horned chub lay in under the bank. Then one day in the fall a buyer happened along and then those two steers went towards the station corral. Billy, on his return from school, missed his pals, as he called them, and asked his dad where they had gone to. "To buy clothes and boots and what not for you, ain't that enough?" Billy began to try to explain, but he took he got stopped him.

"And so he got to thinkin' and readin' and plannin'. And of nights he would gaze out of his window where away in the distance he could picture the halo of light from street lamps and shows and stores; he knew that if he worked there he could do as he liked with what he earned and so he would doze off to sleep dreaming he was a millionaire. And his dad rubbed those crinkly new ten-dollar bills and dreamed how many more it would take to make a thousand. That's fun!

She sat on the edge of the bed on the third floor back, and was mentally figuring out how she stood with the world. Below and out from her stretched a noisy, smelly, you-get-him-before-he-gets-you kind of a city feeling; it was spring and the Hydro had a subdued glare in the misty night. All her life had been spent amid this choking kind of an atmosphere, the kind that to some soon kills. A gramaphone blared forth, voices thickened with dissipation blended in unharmoniously. Again she picked up the magazine and read:

—The river free of ice once more eddied and the sunlit ripples seemed to laugh beneath the green pines whispering shadows. A woodpecker tapped an old pine stub, a love message to its mate. Around the edge of the tamarac muskegs the partridges drummed. On the old snake fence a boy sat straddling the top cedar rail—he was fixing up a fishing line for suckers.

"Gosh, this is awful stuff they're putting in our books now; what's a muskeg, a partridge or a snake fence; to the deuce with it. I'm going out to see Sheba Darab the Vampire in the 'Bone Head.'" And touching up her eye brows with the end of a burnt match, touched the end of her nose and cheeks with a little "puff," reddened her lips and shuffled down the three flights of stairs and made for the nearest movie. That's fun?

After all, isn't it fun:

When you feel the touch of sunlight on the back of the neck about the end of March; when the crows are cawing in the wood lot; or hear the plink-plonk of the sap on the bottom of the pails? When you hear the box stove roaring, and the wagon wheels creak on the snow of a frosty morn'? When you're haying and that welcome little breeze tickles the very roots of your hair on your hot forehead, or when you cut a cedar or pitchy pine stick and smell that woodsy smell that you can't forget? After all, what is fun? Nothing but happiness a-bubbling over of the impulses of your better self, and yet how many of us are seeking it elsewhere, in trying to keep up with the Joneses; to marry riches; to be discontented because we are not in the South Sea Isles? We are letting the fun and joy and living pass us by like a shadow—as a cloud passes over the sun we see it, but don't appreciate it till it has passed.

SURE CURE

Servant Girl—"I'm so awful sleepy in the morning, doctor."

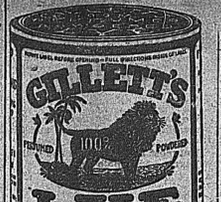
Doctor—"Ah! Have you a sweetheart, may I ask?"

Servant Girl (blushing)—"Yes."

"Who is he, may I ask?"

"He's the night policeman."

"Ah, then, give him up, and fall in love with the milkman."



HOW BIG IS A HOUSE?

The lecturer was describing and advocating modern, humane and intelligent methods of dealing with young children. As he paused for an instant, a grim-faced woman rose up. "Will you answer me one plain question?" she challenged him. "This shilly-shallying with children is all right at times, but there are times when nothing but a good spanking will do. What do you do when a child stamps his foot and says 'I won't do it!'"

The lecturer waited. The questioner added nothing to her question. "Do you call that a plain question?" he asked in an incredulous tone, as though he could not believe his ears.

"I certainly do," she said with satisfaction.

"Well, Madame," said the lecturer, "I will answer that plain question if you will answer one of mine. How big is a house?"

The woman stared. "That's not a plain question. What sort of a house?"

"Aha!" said the lecturer, "You can't answer me till I have told you what sort of a house. Well, I can't answer you till you tell me what sort of a child."

"I don't see what that's got to do with it," said the woman, but somewhat taken aback.

"Well, here's a case. A little child of three, very nervous, sensitive, recently over an illness, has been on a long, hot railway journey. At the end, exhausted from lack of sleep, excited to the point of distraction by the noise, and a thousand fears he cannot explain, with a beginning of stomach-trouble from the irregular meals, he is told by someone who does not understand little children, to carry a satchel much too heavy for him. Perhaps you would expect a three-year-old to say, under such circumstances, 'I'm sorry, but I'm not feeling very well and it is really quite beyond my strength.' But I don't blame him a bit for stamping his foot and screaming. And certainly he does not deserve the same treatment as a loutish lad of fourteen who refuses to obey a reasonable request. And yet you expect some answer that will be the same for both these cases."

"Every child is different from every other child, and only his mother is in a position to know how to take him. All sets of circumstances are different from all others, and only those who know all about the case have any chance of guessing what is the right thing to do. You must do that most difficult of all things, think, and think hard, before you know what is the right thing to do. But before you begin to think, just remember that if a child stamps his foot and says 'I won't' to you it is because you have brought him up wrong. When you see a dog that habitually snarls and shows his teeth, you do not say "What a disagreeable nature that dog has." You say, "Heavens! what a brutal master the poor creature must have had."

CRITICAL SITUATION EXISTS IN BERGENLAND

Vienna, September 21.—The situation in Bergenland, the strip of territory on the Hungarian border awarded Austria by the treaty of Trianon, is hourly growing more critical, according to the government view.

It was reported that an entente ultimatum to Hungary says a commercial blockade would be instituted unless the territory is completely evacuated by the Hungarians within twenty-four hours.

Reports from Bergenland declare that the bands of irregulars are rapidly increasing, that the town of Ostenburg is mobilizing its entire population of military age, and that posters calling the people to arms in the Eisenstadt district are signed "in the name of Emperor Charles."

The Austrian authorities state they also have information that artillery is being assembled at Kecksemet. Exchanges of shots occurred Sunday between an Austrian patrol and Hungarian bands.

CONSIDERING THE EDITOR

To save an editor from starvation, take his paper and pay for it promptly, says The Tavistock Gazette. To save him from bankruptcy advertise liberally. To save him from despair send him every item of news you can get hold of. To save him from profanity write your correspondence plainly on one side of the sheet and send it in as early as possible. To save him from mistakes bury him. Dead people are the only ones who never make mistakes.

FINE WEATHER

Weather is fine for livin'—and that's what most of us want
As much as we do the shadows of glory that hound and haunt;

Weather is fine for loving,
And dreaming and sitting by,
Hearing the harp of the evening wind,
The lark of the morning sky.

Weather is fine for laughin'—and that's what most of us need
To hurry the heal of the wounds we feel when the old, sore places bleed;

Weather is fine for dancing,
And delving with what life sends
To help us along to the smile and song
And the beautiful faith of friends.

Weather is fine for fightin'—and that's what most of us know
As over the hills and hollows struggling for joy we go;

Weather is fine for singing
And swinging and smiling away
To the lilt of the looms of twilight,
The boom of the mills of day.

DEVISING MEANS FOR SPEEDY HANDLING OF CATTLE SHIPMENTS

Montreal, September 21.—With the object of devising means for the speedy handling of cattle shipments through the port of Montreal, the livestock commissioners, department of agriculture, have arranged to meet local cattle brokers and shipping men in Montreal Thursday. Pat Burns, the Calgary cattle raiser and exporter, who has been to England on cattle business, will arrive at Quebec tonight, and is expected to meet the commissioners here Thursday.

James McDonnell, of James McDonnell Co., Ltd., cattle brokers and exporters, said that there are now 60,000 head of cattle in the western provinces awaiting shipment from this port, but that there were not enough cattle-carrying ships to convey them at present available. Mr. McDonnell expressed the belief that Portland and Boston will be used in any event during the winter months, as Halifax was too far away and St. John, N.B., was a bad port for the handling of livestock, being unprovided with stockyard accommodation.

DOMINUS ILLUMINATIO MEA

Richard D. Blackmore, the author of "Lorna Doone," had as wonderful a dream experience as Samuel T. Coleridge, perhaps more wonderful when we take into account the fact this his poetical dream was not induced by opium. Blackmore attended the funeral of a relative and at night he dreamt that he was there again and heard the mourners sing some stanzas which impressed him so much that he was able to write them without change of a word the next morning. He sent them to the editor of The University Magazine in 1879, permitting him to print the verses, if he would agree to print nothing beyond his initials at the foot of the poem. The authorship was kept a secret until the complete story was published in The Athenoeum, for July 3, 1909. This extraordinary dream poem, entitled "Dominus Illuminatio Mea," is as follows:

In the hours of death, after this life's whim
When the heart beats low, and the eyes grow dim,
And pain has exhausted every limb—
The lover of the Lord shall trust in Him.

When the will has forgotten the life-long aim,
And the mond can only disgrace its fame,
And a man is uncertain of his own name,
The power of the Lord shall fill this frame.

When the last sigh is heaved and the last tear shed
And the coffin is waiting beside the bed,
And the widow and the child forsake the dead,
The angel of the Lord shall lift this head.

For even the purest delight may pall,
The power must fail, and the pride must fall,
And the love of the dearest friends grow small—
But the glory of the Lord is all in all.

TO START WORK SOON ON BRIDGE NEAR RED DEER

Cost of Structure in Neighborhood of $75,000—Will Furnish Work.

Work will be started this fall, according to Hon. Alex Ross, minister of public works, on the bridge across the Red Deer river, some seven or eight miles east of Red Deer city. This bridge was in the estimates last year, and it is planned to get the abutments excavated this fall and get out the gravel before the freeze up, so the piers will be put in this winter. The cost of the bridge will be in the neighborhood of $75,000, and will be of two steel spans, one 200 feet and the other 135 feet in length.

The bridge, which will probably be open for traffic will give direct access to Red Deer from the Pleasant Valley district, cutting down a twenty mile detour to less than half the distance.

Starting work on this bridge will give work to a number of men and help considerably in the anticipated unemployment situation.

ELECTRIC ENERGY TRANSMITTED 1,000 MILES

Thirty years' experimenting ended in triumph at Pittsfield, Mass., on September 13, when the General Electric Company succeeded in transmitting a one-million-volt electrical current. In practical terms that means it should be possible now to transmit electrical energy on a commercial scale over a distance approximately of 1,000 miles.

By her first husband she had 20 children. Four years ago he died and she married a man twenty years her junior, and since then two children have been born to them.

CLAIMS HE IS OLDEST HUMAN

"Uncle" John Shell, who claims to be the oldest living human being, has just passed his 133rd birthday at his home in Greasy Creek, Leslie County, Ky. Shell says he was born in 1788, when Kentucky was part of Virginia. He and his father, Samuel Shell, gained fame more than one hundred years ago as gunmakers. The old man says his people came from Holland to Pennsylvania two hundred years ago, and that he is connected with the Shell oil family.
